

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

"GREEK FOR BEGINNERS" is the title of a book prepared by Prof. Joseph B. Mayor, and published in London in 1869. An American edition of that book—considerably altered in form, however—was published in 1880 as "Coy's Mayor's Greek Lessons."

The book now issued is, in one sense, at least, a revised edition of "Coy's Mayor"; but so numerous and extensive have been the changes introduced, that it has seemed proper for me, in justice to both Prof. Mayor and myself, to assume the entire responsibility for the same. I have, therefore, dropped Prof. Mayor's name from the title-page, although most cheerfully acknowledging my indebtedness to the book which he has published.

The distinctive features of "Greek for Begin-Ners" consist (1) in its "building up a boy's knowledge edge of Greek upon the foundation of his knowledge of English and Latin"; (2) in the fact that "no Greek words have been used in the earlier part of the book except such as have connections either in English or Latin." Thus it is hoped that something may have been done to lessen the feeling of strangeness, more or less, with which a boy must always begin the study of a new language. However, to quote more fully from Prof. Mayor:

Do what we will, it is impossible to make the learning of Greek an easy thing, it is impossible to dispense with large calls upon the memory. What I have attempted to do is, to provide hooks and eyes for the memory, to appeal as far as possible to the understanding, and to give the learner some glimpse from the first of the rewards which he may expect at the end of his labor. Of course it is true that, the memory being earlier developed than the other faculties, and probably more active in childhood than in later life, it is desirable for children to learn many things before they can fully understand them; but, on the other hand, the continued unreasoning exercise of memory is, I believe, the cause of much of that want of interest, and even contemptuous disbelief, in all knowledge, which we so often meet with in grown men and women. Children as a general rule overflow with curiosity; they can not understand all things, they must be content to take a great deal on trust; but it does not follow from this that they should not be helped and encouraged to understand wherever their faculties admit of it. The rapid growth of memory is given to them that under its shelter the finer powers of the mind, imagination and reason, may find room and opportunity for gradual development. If these are not called into exercise, the exercise of the memory itself soon becomes irksome, the mind is stunted, and all intellectual interest dies away.

What has been just said will to a certain extent hold good against those who want no grammars, but would have a boy pick up his classics from his master at school, as he might pick up his modern languages from a Swiss "bonne" at home. The only meaning of this can be, that there is to be no systematic teaching of classics; which is equivalent to saying that a multitude of isolated facts are more easily received and retained in the memory than the same facts classified and arranged. Thus we have again "the unreasoning exercise of the memory," attended with the further disadvantage, that there is no call upon the learner to brace up his mind for strenuous effort. It may, however, be said that under the direction of his teachers he is to be gradually trained to classify the facts for himself, and thus gain a valuable lesson in observation and induction. If such is the view taken, it seems to me to fall into the opposite error of demanding too great an exercise of the reasoning powers. A boy may fairly be expected to recognize instances of laws which he has been already taught, but hardly to discover the law for himself. If, on the other hand, the master first states and explains the law to him, and then points out instances or asks him to point them out, this is just the old grammar over again; only that it is to be taught viva voce by the master, instead of being prepared beforehand by the pupil for himself. I feel as strongly as any one the importance of a boy, especially a young boy, having all his lessons thoroughly catechised into him; and if the alternative lay between a boy's learning off grammatical rules by rote without explanation, and his having them taught to him by the master without book, I should certainly prefer the latter. But, as a security against the possible inefficiency of masters on the one hand, and the probable carelessness of boys on the other, I think there can be no doubt that the best plan is the use of a text-book, to be first explained by the master and then learned by the boys.

There is one further objection on which it may be well to say a few words. Granting that boys should learn off rules and practice examples, it may be doubted whether it is worth while to attempt an explanation of the rules in an elementary work. The study of principles, it is said, should be left to the end of the school course. My own experience does not quite agree with this. I believe general principles of almost any kind may be talked into boys; what puzzles them is a long chain of reasoning. The principles of grammar are not more abstract than those of geometry, and I think they may be explained in a manner which is both interesting and useful to the abler boys. Even young boys are capable of being taught the analysis of sentences, which is perhaps the very best instrument for clearing away confusion of thought.

It is possible that some passages may be found in this book, in which I have rather had in view the case of an adult student using it for his or her own self-instruction, than that of an ordinary school-boy. If this should seem so to any master, he will, of course, use his own discretion as to omitting such a passage. In general, however, I believe that a boy who starts with a fair knowledge of Latin will find no difficulty in doing each exercise in its turn; and I hope that when he reaches the end of the book he will have acquired a good practical vocabulary, together with some idea of the constructions of the simple sentence. Even in the unsatisfactory case where Greek is discontinued after a few months' study, I hope the scholar will feel that his time has not been entirely thrown away, but that he has improved his knowledge of English, and at the same time gained an insight, however slight, into the relations it bears toward a language to which the civilized world owes so much.

To some teachers it may seem that this book is unfortunately lacking in those suggestions of class-room procedure upon which they have come to depend. It is intentionally so; the purpose having been to provide the data or materials for a method—not the method itself. For it has been assumed that the competent teacher already understands his work, and will find for himself such details of method as his own experience must suggest. Moreover, were it possible for all teachers to once agree as to a supposed ideal method of instruction, it is not at all likely that many would be willing or able to pursue identically the same method for successive years. There is, indeed, no such thing as an absolutely best method of class-room instruction; for every method must be constantly readjusted, as the varying aptitudes of the pupils or the larger experience and increasing skill of the teacher shall suggest. And for these reasons this book has been kept as free as possible from pedagogical limitations.

The experienced teacher does not need to be reminded that there is a most important advantage gained through "the plan of teaching elementary grammar by minute references." That command of knowledge which is called mastery is especially facilitated both by the quasi process of investigation itself, as well as by the fuller and more protracted attention which it necessarily involves.

It can not be too often iterated and reiterated that each lesson should be thoroughly MASTERED by every member of the class, and at the time when it is due. Nothing will prove more discouraging to the student than to find himself disqualified for the prompt and easy doing of an exercise through mere insufficiency of preparation. Hesiod has said, ἀρχη δέ τοι ημισυ παντός; and to enable the beginner, therefore, to test from time to time his mastery of the earlier lessons, a list of Review Questions has been furnished in Appendix 11.

What use is to be made of the frequent references to the "Primer of Philology," by John Peile, or of the philological matter contained in "Explanations" and the Appendix, must depend on the circumstances, and is left to the discretion of the teacher. It will be well for him to remember, however, that—

"At the present time there is a widely spread desire for scientific method in education. . . . Without doubt the desire could be more readily met, were not classics and science felt to be widely separated. . . . And yet this separation of the two subjects is detrimental to both. The scholar accuses the man of science of 'a want of taste'; the man of science regards the scholar as one who neglects the present for the past. But when we regard language as an organism ["parasitic, indeed, but still an organism"], and the science of language as a physical science, this unfortunate separation is bridged over. . . . Now, by teaching language scientifically, all these distinctions [of inflection] and the reasons for them are impressed upon the pupil; and thus even a knowledge of the declensions becomes of value. . . . he knows something of language. And of all knowledge this is the most valuable. For language is in a nearer relation to the mind than anything else. It stands between us and the outward world; we may also say between us and our own thoughts. Unless we know something of its true nature, it is almost impossible for us to emancipate ourselves from its dominion and become thinking, not merely speaking, beings."—Evelyn Abbott, Translator of Curtius.

"And though, of course, scientific investigation and the practical teaching required at school are naturally far apart, it is by no means impossible to enliven the latter even from the very first by the insight obtained in the paths of science. Changes of sounds, rules of accentuation, forms of inflection, are no longer what they were, in the eyes of one who has learned to combine them into a whole, and to recognize even in the smallest details the web woven by the genius of language. . . . In this way, too, something of the delight which every glimpse of order and law insures will come even to the pupil's aid. If, when the forms have been impressed on the memory, the pupil is taught by correct analysis to see how they have arisen, and to perceive the special causes of apparent irregularities, there is no doubt that by such a course the attention is sharpened and the memory rendered more tenacious. . . . And this can be brought to the help of the youthful pupil without in the least increasing the material amount of his studies. . . . In the general demand for 'concentration' in education, it must be regarded as a considerable gain that instruction in language, if imparted with regard to the new science [philology], approaches more nearly to the method of the so-called exact sciences. . . .

"And not even the most enthusiastic admirer of Greek as a language will go so far as not to recognize the object of learning Greek in a knowledge of Homer, Sophocles, and Demosthenes, no less than in understanding the form of the aorist or use of the optative. But the only way by which the intellectual treasures to be found in the Greek language can become so perfectly familiar as to have a real influence in education, is an accurate knowledge of the language; and the study of the language in the literal sense, that is, careful practice in the forms and their uses and the gradual unlocking of the treasures of the vocabulary, justly lays claim to a large part of the time devoted to learning Greek. . . ."—Curtus.

Suggestions and criticisms will be most thankfully received.

INTRODUCTION.—Gr. 1, 2, 3 d.

English, Latin, and Greek all belong to the same great family of languages, the Indo-European, and resemble one another in their inflections and constructions, as well as in the possession of many common roots, so that the knowledge of one of them is a great help to the knowledge of the others.—"Primer of Philology," cap. iii.

When we speak of the Indo-European languages as forming one family, we mean that there was a time in the history of the world when the ancestors of the great majority of the present inhabitants of Europe dwelt with the ancestors of the present inhabitants of India, and spoke the same language, a language different from those spoken at the time by the ancestors of the present Jews, Turks, Negroes, etc. Each nation, as it migrated from the original seat of the Indo-European race, departed more or less from the original language; and thus arose a variety of dialects which in course of time fixed themselves as distinct languages. Each of these languages again could propagate itself by conquest or colonization, thus producing new dialects, to establish themselves in their turn as independent languages. Accordingly we find various degrees of relationship existing between the several members of the great Indo-European family.

languages may be said to stand to one another in the relation of mother and daughter, e. g., Latin is the mother of Italian and French, and Anglo-Saxon the mother of English. Others may be more fitly described as sister-languages, and this is the relation of Latin and Greek. They are children of a common parent, and have many words and forms and constructions in common; but there are only a small number of words which have been borrowed directly from the one language by the other. The relation between English and these two languages is very different. There is first of all the general Indo-European connection, owing to which many of the oldest English words belong to roots which are also found in Latin and Greek, e. g., the word father appears as pater in Latin and Greek; mother is mater in Latin, meter in Greek. There is, secondly, a more special connection with Latin, partly through the Latin Church, which has supplied most of our ecclesiastical terms, but to a far more important extent through the Norman Conquest, owing to which our language received a great accession of French words, which were mainly of Latin origin. Lastly, we have a large class of scientific words derived from Latin, and still more from Greek; some of these latter were brought into our language in a Latin form long ago, as theology, philosophy, while others are being every day added to express new discoveries or inventions, such as telephone, phonograph.

The great point of difference between English and the two classical languages is, that English, as compared with them, is an example of an analytic or uninflected language, while they belong to the class of synthetic or inflected languages.¹ It is true that English is not, like some languages, entirely destitute of inflections. We have our objective and possessive cases, our preterites and participles; but in most instances where Greek and Latin would express a change of relation by changing the form of the word, we keep our word the same, only prefixing to it under certain circumstances a preposition, or auxiliary of some sort. Owing to this want of inflections, English is less free than Greek or Latin as regards the order in which the words of the sentence have to be arranged. Of this we shall see examples as we proceed.—"Primer of Philology," cap. viii., 7.

Dialects.

Several dialects were spoken in Greece, differing from one another much as Scotch differs from English, or Yorkshire from Somersetshire. The most important dialect was the Attic, spoken by the Athenians, and it is to this dialect that we shall here confine our attention.

HINTS FOR STUDY AND RECITATION.

Be prepared to give a logical analysis of each sentence.

Of each word, notice what it is and where made; what word, or words, it is connected with in thought; what relation of thought it expresses: cite the authority of the Grammar, and justify the idiom.

For the inflection of a word, begin with the principal parts and synopsis of the tense, of verbs; with the comparison, of adverbs and adjectives.

For the analysis of a word—verb, adjective, or noun—give (a) the elements in their natural order (cf. Gr. 353); notice (b) the euphonic changes and additions, and (c) the accent.

Let the translation follow, as far as possible, the order of the author's words; for the order of his words best shows the order of his thoughts.

It will prove of special assistance in acquiring a vocabulary to notice English or, Latin words connected in derivation with the Greek words of each lesson.

I. CHARACTERS AND SOUNDS.

¹ In these names give ē the sound of c in prey. ² See also Gr. 20.

³ In these names give i the sound of i in caprice, and follow the Greek accent.

 $^{^4}$ In this name give au the sound of ou in $our. \ ^5$ See also Gr. 11 a. 2

Spell the Greek words of § 3, and write the Greek words with Latin letters, and the English with Greek letters.

EXPLANATIONS.—The word alphabet is derived from the names of the first two letters; Gr. 8 a.

The Greek word $\psi \iota \lambda \delta \nu$, which occurs in the names of the fifth and twentieth letters, means "bare," i. e., not diphthongal; and was used to distinguish ϵ from a similarly sounded diphthong $a\iota$, and ν from $o\iota$ —still sounded alike in modern Greek,

In the Greek name of the fifteenth letter, μικρόν means "small"; in that of the last letter, μέγα means "large."

REMARK.—Iota had at times a consonant sound, jot, and upsilon a corresponding consonant, vau or digamma (Gr. 23 a); to which, though obsolete, frequent reference will be made in explaining apparent irregularities in the formation and inflection of words.

2. Vowels, Gr. 9, 10, 12.

Diphthongs, Gr. 13, 14 (omit b and d), 16.

Breathings, Gr. 17, 18.

Consonants, Gr. 19, 20, 21, 22-27.

Syllables, Gr. 89-91.

Quantity, Gr. 92, 93 (coarse print only), 94.

Accent, Gr. 95-97, 99-102; and read 104, 120.

Punctuation, Gr.—read 121.

Remark.—The written accents are said to have been invented about 200 B. C., to assist foreigners in acquiring correct pronunciation.

3. Exercises on the Letters.

In the following exercise, spell all the Greek words, divide them into syllables, and pronounce them as required by the written accent; also write them with Latin letters.

¹ Pronounced yote, represented in this book by j, and to be uttered like English initial y.

⁹ Read Appendix 1.

8 Read App. 2.

Εχ. 1. Δημοσθένης, Ξενοφῶν, Σοφοκλῆς, Κῦρος, Λεωνίδας, 'Τάκινθος, 'Αγγλία, 'Ιάκωβος, Οἰδίπους, Πειραιεύς, Περικλῆς, Μίνως, Νεῖλος, Τροία, 'Ρόδος, Θερσίτης, Γύλιππος, Βρασίδας, Χείρων, Ψυχή, Φοῖβος, 'Ωρίων, 'Αθῆναι, Σαπφώ, Καλυψώ, 'Αλέξανδρος, 'Αμαζών.

And the following names of gods: Zεύς (Jupiter), "Ηρα (Juno), 'Αθηνα (Minerva), "Αρης (Mars), Ποσειδῶν (Neptune), 'Αφροδίτη (Venus), 'Ερμῆς (Mercury), "Αρτεμις (Diana), "Ηφαιστος (Vulcan).

Ex. 2. Put into Greek ': Phoebus, Bacchus, Ilium, Aeschylus, Thrasymachus, Antigonē, Euphrosynē, Cyrus, Alcibiadēs, Diagoras, Ameinias, Charmidēs, Lycūrgus, Fabius, Vergilius, Quintus, Evagoras, Xerxēs, Gordium, Hēbē, Panthēon ($\bar{\mathbf{e}} = \epsilon \iota$), Nīlus ($\bar{\imath} = \epsilon \iota$), Rōma, Sōcratēs, Charōn, Psammis, Mopsus, Hōrus, Byzantium, Hydra, Jasōn, Sphinx.

II. INFLECTION.—VOWEL STEMS.

4. An inflected word has two parts: the stem, or unchanging part, which represents the idea of the word itself; and the ending, which is added to show the relation of this idea to the other parts of the sentence. Thus, Lat. servo means "slave"—not "a slave"; but servis means "for slaves."

² The stem is often modified in the loss or addition of a letter by euphonic change; it may then be called the base. Thus, servo- is the stem, but serv- the base of Lat. servis.

The Greek declension differs from the Latin in three respects: (1) the meaning of the ablative, or from-case, is expressed by the genitive; (2) the instrumental and locative meanings of the Latin ablative are expressed by the dative; (3) there is a dual number—only used, however, when two are spoken of as a pair or couple. Read Gr. 123.

Gender, Gr. 124-127.

Accent in declension: in general, Gr. 128, 129; neuter words, Gr. 546.

5. The Article.

Greek has a definite article, commonly employed where "the" would be needed in English. But there is no indefinite article in Greek; in general, the noun without the article is equivalent to the indefinite article and noun in English.

Inflection of the article, Gr. 270, 272.

REMARK.—Four forms of the article $(\delta, \dot{\eta}, oi, ai)$ are without written accent, because they are proclitics, Gr. 111 a.

The English equivalents of such words are also, for the most part, proclitic: e. g., th' book, for the book. The relatively unimportant character of these words leads to carelessness in utterance, whereby they and the next word are pronounced as one.

6. Inflection varies according to the characteristic, or last letter of the stem: Gr. 131, 132. There are, however, five varieties of the

INFLECTION.

First Declension.

Yet all these varieties have the same characteristic, as may be seen in the dual and plural; and in the dialectic forms of the singular like τιμά, Doric for τιμή, or ἐππότα, epic for ἐππότης. Read Gr. 134.

Feminines.—1. Paradigms χώρα and τιμή, Gr.
 Also Gr. 137, 138, 141.

Special Rule of Accent.—When syllables are contracted, the acute followed by the grave (unwritten, of course) gives the circumflex. Thus: $\chi\omega\rho\acute{a}$ - $\omega\nu$ (Gr. 97) gives $\chi\omega\rho\acute{a}\nu$.

REMARK.—Contraction of dissimilar vowels, a, ϵ , o, etc., into one long vowel or diphthong rests on two processes: the assimilation of one vowel to the other, and the subsequent union of the assimilated vowels. Thus: $\chi \omega \rho \bar{a} \omega \nu = \chi \omega \rho \omega \omega \nu = \chi \omega \rho \omega \nu$.

2. Paradigms γέφυρα and γλῶσσα, Gr. 135. Also Gr. 139 (a and d only), 140.

Special Rule of Accent.—The nouns ending in \check{a} have recessive accent.

The inflection of $\phi i \lambda la$ may be compared with that of the Lat. familia:

Sing. N. V. φιλία familia

G. $-a_{5}$ — ae, or as. Cf. paterfamilias.

D. $-q^1$ — ae

A. $-\dot{a}\nu^3$ — am

Plur. N. V. φιλίαι — ae

G. $-\hat{\omega}\nu^{3}$ — arum

D. -ais — $\overline{i}s$

A. $-a_5$ — as

⁸ For φιλιάων, said to have once been φιλιασων (Gr. 71).

8. Syntax.—The article as adjective, Gr. 620 (read 600').

In δ βlos ἐστὶ μικρός, life is short, i. e., life in general, the article is called "generic"; but in ἡ ἄγκυρά ἐστι μικρά, the anchor is small—referring to some particular anchor—the article is called "restrictive" (Gr. 656, 659).

The appositive, Gr. 623. The vocative, Gr. 709. The genitive, Gr. 728. The dative, Gr. 762.

REMARKS.—1. In studying the syntax of the noun, it must be remembered that Greek is descended from a parent language which had at least eight cases: a nominative, a genitive or ofcase, a dative or to-case, an accusative, a vocative, a locative or in-case, an instrumental or with-case, an ablative or from-case; and that—

- 2. Partly through phonetic decay and partly through extension of original meanings, the genitive form has come to stand for both genitive and ablative, i. e., both of and from, relations; and the dative form, also for instrumental and locative, i. e., to, for, with, by, at, and in, relations.
- 3. The genitive, as the name implies, is primarily the genuscase, expressing the class or kind to which an object belongs; sometimes, indeed, expressing more description or relation only.

Note.—In parsing, the student must use his own judgment in distinguishing which of genitives described in Gr. 729, and of datives described in Gr. 762, is presented in an exercise.

¹ In δύο τῶν ἀγκυρῶν, the sense may be given as "two of, or from, the anchors"; φόβφ ἔλειπον may be rendered "they were leaving for fear," i. e., with fear, i. e., in fear. Thus easily do the meanings of different cases overlap or become interchangeable.

These exercises may be either prepared before recitation, or done at sight in the class-room. In either case the corrected forms should be subsequently brought back to the class-room done with ink; and the student should then be ready to recite them from memory. The Greek exercises can suggest the order of words. Facility and accuracy in doing the exercises can only be attained by MASTERING each preliminary step.

Ex. 8. God's gifts and works. I differ from the Spartan hoplite. I speak with the voice of a man. I differ from the man in-respect-to-my' life. I speak to the messenger. I mention the sailors to the judge. The instruments of the athletes. The friendship of the brothers for the man. The rule of the gods. The work of the sailor for the poet. The life of the sailors. The judge of the work. The work of the judge. I mention the athletes. I differ from the poet in my life.

III. ADJECTIVES.

14. The First and Second Declensions.

Paradigms ἀγαθός, φίλιος, Gr. 222; and ἥσυχος, Gr. 226. Also Gr. 222 entire, 225, 582¹.

Explanations.—Case-endings, etc., Gr. 133 (Vowel Decl. only), 142 (156), 143, 148, 154. Read App. 3.

15. Syntax.—In Greek as in Latin, and to a certain extent in English, adjectives may be used as substantives (read Gr. 594, 621).

16. Exercises on Adjectives.

In subsequent exercises, translate; and parse, so far as practicable, according to "Hints" near the beginning of this book.

Εχ. 9. οἱ φίλιοι ναῦται. ἀρχαῖα ἔργα. νέος βίος. λέγω ὀλίγα τῷ ἀλόγῳ ἀνθρώπῳ. διαφέρω τοῦ δεξιοῦ ποιητοῦ. τῷ ἀθέφ κριτῆ. θεία φωνή. λέγω τοὺς πολεμίους ναύτας. τῷ μόνῳ θεῷ. τὰ ἀγαθὰ ἔργα τοῦ φιλίου Σπαρτιάτου.

Ex. 10. O wise brother. The good gifts of the friendly goddess. I differ from the young athlete. The hostile land of the Spartans. The right-hand path. I speak of the clever young man. I speak of wise judges and clever poets. I differ from Diagoras in wisdom. The beginning of the designs of Antigone. I speak to the few among (i. e., of) the Athenians. The godless citizens. Ancient deeds of wise men. The wisdom of the ancients. Irrational Athenians. I differ from the clever Athenians.

IV. THE VERB.

17. The verb (Lat. verbum), as the name implies, is the word of the sentence, for without it no statement is possible (Gr. 592). It may be, however, either itself the predicate, or only the predicative, i. e., the means of predication—also called the copula (Gr. 596).

- 18. Moods.—The mood of the verb shows the mood or manner in which a writer presents his statements. It must not be thought of, therefore, as also indicating the actual or necessary relations of things themselves.
- 1. The Indicative mood expresses what is viewed as real. As, "the sky is falling, and we shall catch larks"; λέγομεν we are speaking.
- 2. The Infinitive mood, as the name implies, is in reality no mood at all. It expresses the idea of the verb as a substantive, and follows in general the constructions of a noun.'
- 19. Tenses. Tense is, strictly speaking, a form of the verb which distinguishes time. There are, however, not only "present," "past," and "future" tenses, but "imperfect," "aorist," and "perfect" tenses also. For the tenses, or more correctly—

The tense-systems show not only the time of the action, but also how it is viewed; whether as incomplete, completed, or indefinite (Gr. 822, with b). Hence such double names as "future perfect tense," etc.

20. The Present System, Active—or present and imperfect tenses, active voice.—The substantive verb is of great importance for showing the connection between the various Indo-European languages. It has the same stem in English, Latin, and Greek; and there is considerable resemblance in the inflections, especially if the older forms are compared 1. In all these languages it is irregular, and in Greek and Latin it is also defective. In Greek it has only three tenses: the present, the imperfect, and the future.

21. The verb $\epsilon i \mu l I$ am (old form $\epsilon \sigma \mu l$, stem ϵs ; cf. Lat. es-se):

Present Indicative of eiul.

Plural. Singular. 1. εἰμί, I am. 1. — (Gr. 378). 1. ἐσμέν, we are. 2. εl, thou art. 2. ἐστόν, you two are. 2. ἐστέ, you are. 3. $\vec{\epsilon}\sigma\tau l$, he is. 3. $\vec{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\delta\nu$, they two are. 3. $\vec{\epsilon}l\sigma l$, they are.

Participle. Infinitive.

Nom. M. wv F. ova elvaı N. ŏν

In addition to the foregoing, learn the imperfect indicative, as given in Gr. 478.

The general rule for the accent of verbs (Gr. 386') has exceptions; Gr. 113 c.

REMARK.—Enclitics, like proclitics, are due to careless and indistinct articulation of words relatively unimportant. English It's and 'Tis, for It is.

22. Elements of the Verb.—The augment, Gr. 354. Personal endings, active only, Gr. 375, 376, first sentence of both 377 (cf. 311 b) and 378, 381.

Remark.—The endings μ , σ i, τ i, μ es, are easily identified with the pronouns με, σε, τόν, ἄμ-μες 2 (me, you, him, we), which were affixed to the Greek verb, instead of being placed before as in English.

1 Compare the old forms in Latin and Greek:

S. 1. G. ἐσμί, L. esum P. ἐσμέs, esumus

2. ἐσσί. ἐστέ, estis

In the augmented tenses, μι, σι, τι, ντι, dropped ι when the word had assumed the extra burden of the augment at the beginning, and became μ, s, τ, ντ (of. Lat. era-m, era-s, era-t, era-nt). Finally, μ became ν, and τ was dropped, according to the law for final consonants, Gr. 86.*

23. Syntax.—The subject, Gr. 601 (read 602). The verb, Gr. 603.
The predicate, Gr. 614, 669.

24. Exercises on the Verb ciul.

[Memorize and inflect vocabulary.]

δ χρόνος	time
ό στρατιώτης	soldier
ζῶον	creature, animal
ό πόλεμος	war
έδρα	seat
τέχνη	art

* EXPLANATIONS .- In the present indicative:

eiμl may come from έμ-μι for έσ-μι (Gr. 46, 34).

el " " for for for. 62, 71).

elol " " évil (Gr. 69, 55 d) for éviti = éo-pil.

In the imperfect indicative:

 $\hbar \nu$ may come from $\hbar \nu \nu = \hbar \sigma - \nu$, in 1st sing.; and η " " ησ-a; cf. a for ν, Gr. 169.

 $\hbar \nu$ " $\hbar \sigma \epsilon - \nu$ (Gr. 87, 2)— ϵ being apparently a phonetic addition, and ν movable having become inseparable.

How may come from η_{σ} -ar, -ar being a phonetic alternative of the ending ν .

In the infinitive, elvas is for evvas from eg-vas.

In the participle, $\omega \nu$ is for $\ell \omega \nu$ from $\ell \sigma \omega \nu$, having a phonetic o inserted. Cf. Gr. 372 a.

The analysis of other forms will be obvious from the foregoing. Forms of the imperfect without σ are doubtless due to analogy; following the singular, as apparently formed from a stem without σ . Thus perhaps the 1st sing. $\Im \nu$ also.

Ex. 12. The life of the sailors was short. The time was short. The art of the poet is divine. Poets are few. The wise and brave are few. The Attic land was the ancient seat of the muses. The lyre is the instrument of the poet. War was the art of the Spartans. The citizens were friendly. We were alone. You were wise and good. The brave soldiers were Spartans. The judges were wise and clever. The war was short. The brother of the poet Aeschylus was the soldier Ameinias.

25. The verb $\epsilon i\mu l$, present system entire, Gr. 478. The imperative, however, had better be given here:

26. Personal endings of the imperative active, Gr. 380.

Mood-signs and personal endings of the subjunctive and optative active, Gr. first sentence of 417 (cf. 310 a, 372 a), 418 a, 379.

Explanations.—\hat{\omega} is from \hat{\epsilon}\sigma - \omega - \mu \iota (cf. Gr. 383, 1).

\hat{\eta}s " \hat{\epsilon}\sigma - \eta - \sigma \iota (Gr. 37 b, cf. 64).

\hat{\eta} " \hat{\epsilon}\sigma - \eta - \tau \iota (Gr. 64, 86).

\hat{\epsilon}\eta\nu " \hat{\epsilon}\sigma - \iota\eta - \nu.

\hat{\epsilon}\ell\epsilon\nu " \hat{\epsilon}\sigma - \iota\epsilon - \nu.

- 27. Syntax.—1. The subjunctive and optative moods express, in general, what is viewed as possible, or contingent. As, "if the sky should fall, we might catch larks"; λέγωμεν let us speak; λέγοιμεν would that we might speak; λέγοιμεν άν we might speak.
- 2. Tenses always represent the action as completed, incomplete, or a ristic; but they mark the distinctions of time in the indicative mood alone. For what is expressed as only possible or desirable, i. e., by the subjunctive, optative, or imperative, must be thought of as belonging to future time only; while what is expressed as a noun, i. e., by the infinitive, is, of course, not expressed as tense.

When, therefore, λεγέτω he shall speak, is called a present imperative, the word "present" merely signifies "formed from the same stem, and expressing the same view of the action, as the present indicative (Gr. 305). Read Λpp. 4.

Ex. 14. We should be friends. They are Athenian hoplites. They might be Spartans. Let us be citizens of a friendly land. O that we might be friends of the judge! The Spartans were good soldiers. They shall be alone. The muse is friendly to the judge. The rule of the Spartans was brief. The way is short. Let the war be brief. The son-of-Atreus was a Spartan. The messengers of the Athenians were friendly to the Spartans. Let the gifts be few. The gifts for the friend of the sons-of-Atreus are small and few.

29. Paradigm λύω—present and imperfect active, of all moods, Gr. 314; cf. 311 b, c.

Elements.—Augment, Gr. 354-357 (coarse print). Variable suffix—so-called "connecting vowel"—Gr. 310 (372 a), 408, 374.

Personal endings, active, Gr. 375-382. Accent, Gr. 386¹.

Note.—The synopses of the several tense-systems, in the first person singular, are given in Gr. 313, and can be there studied, if more convenient, as tense after tense is assigned.

Explanations. 1—λύω is from λυο-μι, Gr. 383, 1; 33 a.

λύεις is for λυε-σι, Gr. 407.

λύει " λυε-τι, Gr. 407. λύουσι " λυο-νσι. Gr. 55 λύουσι " λυο-νσι, Gr. 55 d. · λύοιμι " λυοιν, Gr. 379 a.

λύοιεν " λυοιν, οτ λυοισαν, Gr. 374 b. . λῦε " λυε-θι, Gr. 383, 2, cf. 393 a.

λύειν " λυε-εν, Gr. 37 e.

έλυον " ε-λυο-μι, as explained in § 22 Rem.

30. Syntax.—Negative particles, Gr. 1018. Or, more specifically, $\mu\dot{\eta}$ is used when the negation is willed, assumed, or aimed at, i. e., in imperative, conditional and final sentences; otherwise ov.

Note.—In the preparation of subsequent exercises let the student be specially careful about the analysis of verbs.

Ex. 16. Friendship is a gift of the gods to men. Time is a judge of man's work. The people should not be hostile to the wise few. Wisdom is not a small (thing). The Athenians were carrying gifts to the goddess. Let the wise Athenian lead. Let us write a friendly letter to the man. I hear that the messenger of the citizens is waiting. Do you hear the voice of the goddess? The soldiers shall bring gifts. Plutarch wrote the lives of worthy men. The soldiers should obey the general. The citizens should not bring gifts to the judges. The flight of the Persians was irrational. I hear that the brother of the poet Aeschylus is the soldier Ameinias.

32. Elements of the Verb, continued.—Root, theme, etc., Gr. 307, 308.

Besides the variable suffix °, other additions are made to the theme, or verb-stem, to form the stem of the present system of many verbs. These additions are explained in Gr. 392–404; of which the coarser print is to be learned.

Note.—Referring to Gr. 392–404 for details as occasion requires, the student should learn to analyze verbs as follows: $\lambda a\mu\beta a\nu\epsilon \tau\omega$ he shall receive, from stem $\lambda a\beta$, tense-suffix $a\nu + \epsilon$, personal ending $\tau\omega$; euphonic change inserts a nasal sound by "anticipation" (cf. also Gr. 46). Read App. 6.

Ex. 17. Translate; analyze and memorize:

φεύγω, flee φυλαττόντων ², guard λείπεις, leave τάττοιμι ², arrange βλάπτω, injure φράζοιεν, tell κρύπτει (cf. Gr. 46), hide ἄγγελλε, announce ἐὰν χαίρης, rejoice γιγνώσκειν, know βάλλουσιν, throw δακρύοιμεν ἄν, weep κρίνωμεν, cf. κρϊτής, judge ἐὰν πράσσωσιν ², perform ἵνα τέμνη, cut πέτρα, rock

Note.—It frequently happens that the formation of the present stem of an irregular verb can be determined by mere inspection, as in $\lambda a\mu\beta \dot{a}\nu\omega$; or by referring to kindred words, as in $\phi\epsilon\dot{\nu}\gamma\omega$, cf. $\phi\nu\gamma\dot{\eta}$, and $\dot{a}\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omega$, cf. $\ddot{a}\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\sigma$. Otherwise, the catalogue of such verbs, Gr. p. 855, can be used.

Ex. 19. The soldiers were pelting their general. Charmides delights in bees. The wise should rule, the people should obey. The man was bringing gifts to the god. The Spartans were injuring the land of their enemies. Fear shall not hurt the soldiers. I hear that the messenger reports the flight of the Persians. Let them bring gifts for the god. Would that I might hear the voice of the poet! Time judges the deeds of men. The Atreidae are hiding their deeds. Judges should not receive gifts. I hear that the judges of the Athenians receive gifts. The generals of the Spartans received gifts. I hear that the Λthenians are leaving their ancient land in fear, and are fleeing. The men should not cut the rock of the goddess. We lament the flight of the hoplites.

35. Special Rule of Accent.—Adjectives in -κος, -λος, -νος, -ρος, -τος, are mostly oxytone.

Εχ. 22. τὸ σκηπτρόν έστι σημείον δυναστείας. αίσχρον και δειλόν έστι φεύγειν έκ μάχης. ή τελευτή τοῦ βίου φοβερά έστι τοῖς ἀθέοις. ᾿Ατρείδης θύει τὴν παρό Ποσειδών δεινοίς ανέμοις ετάραττε την θάλατταν. σοφία καὶ δικαιοσύνη δυναταὶ ἄγκυραί εἰσι τοῦ βίου. οι Σπαρτιαται έλυον τούς νόμους του Λυκούργου. Έφιάλτης ὁ τῶν Σπαρτιατῶν προδότης (cf. προδίδωμι) τοις Πέρσαις εν Θερμοπύλαις την νίκην εφερεν. ουκ αν άρχοιεν των ανθρώπων τα χαλεπα, αλλ' οι άνθρωποι τῶν χαλεπῶν. οἱ γεωργοὶ τὴν γῆν τῷ ἀρότρω στρέφουσιν. ὁ κλέπτης της κλοπης άξιαν δίκην έχοι. οι βάρβαροι τὰς κεφαλάς καὶ τὰς δεξιὰς τῶν νεκρῶν τοῖς θηρίοις ξρριπτον ι. οἱ στρατιῶται θαυμαστῷ κόσμω έβαινον καὶ οἱ πολίται τῆ θέα ἔχαιρον. μὴ τὴν ἀρχαίαν γην λείπωμεν. Ξενοφων και Πρόξενος ήσαν φίλοι ἀρχαῖοι.

youth not find his brother dead! The deeds which the tyrant does should be just (lit. the tyrant should do his deeds just). Wonderful (is) the art thou hast, O sophist. The philosophers considered not poverty but wickedness shameful. Unarmed the Athenians routed the hoplites of the enemy. Dionysius, the tyrant of Syracuse, fled. The fortune of Nicias and the Athenians was terrible. We should admire the courage of Leōnidēs the Spartan. The citizens shall sacrifice a goat to Dionysus. Would that we might hear the beautiful songs of the muses! O that we might see again the glory of the ancient days! The wise man flees both riches and poverty. Not wealth but virtue brings honor.

Ex. 25. Not gold but courage was the wealth of ancient Sparta. The thieves might steal and flee.

Shameful words bring shame to men. The wise and brave should await danger; only cowards flee. The Persians sacrifice to their gods, but do not burn the victims. Lycūrgus proposed new laws for the Lakedaemonians. The poets named the food of the gods ambrosia. Thou art wicked, O Fortune; thou hurtest the good and savest the bad. O that the truth might be manifest to the citizens! Electra steals and saves her brother Orestēs. Time shows the truth. The grave hides rulers and citizens, masters and servants, wise and foolish. The enemy and their possessions are the prizes of victory. He bade us consider our friends the best treasure. The poet sang, and the animals and the trees listened and wondered.

Ex. 27. A wise man's leadership (lit. rule) is not always wise. The general was a powerful athlete. Let us hear the opinion of the judge. Judges should not be lawless. A horse would be an excellent gift for the general. The wise delight in wisdom. Let us pelt the lawless citizens. The athlete considered the prizes of the contest beautiful. The army was a beautiful-thing. The enemy were wretched soldiers. The messenger of the soldiers shall report (lit. announce) to the Persians. War is a terrible thing. O that they would bring arms! The Spartans delighted in war, the Athenians in art.

VI. A FEW SHORT STORIES 1.

Εχ. 28. ὁ Σωκράτης ἄριστος ἢν τῶν ᾿Αθηναίων. ἀλλὰ οἱ ᾿Αθηναίοι ἔλεγον ὅτι τοὺς νέους φθείροιεν ᾿ καὶ ἄξιος εἴη θανάτου. ὁ οὖν Σωκράτης τὸ φάρμακον ἔπινεν. οὕτω γὰρ οἱ ᾿Αθηναίοι τοὺς κακοὺς ἀποκτείνουσιν.

Εχ. 29. ὁ Σόλων ὁ ᾿Αθηναῖος ἢν μάλα σοφός, καὶ οἱ δὲ βάρβαροι τὴν σοφίαν ἐθαύμαζον. ᾿Ανάχαρσις ὁ Σκύθης ἤκουε περὶ τοῦ Σόλωνος καὶ ἤθελε τὸν σοφὸν βλέπειν. ἐλαύνει οὖν εἰς τὰς ᾿Αθήνας ἐπὶ τὴν Σόλωνος οἰκίαν. ἐπεὶ ἔλεγεν ὅτι ἔχων καὶ αὐτὸς δόξαν οἴκοι ἐθέλοι τὸν Σόλωνα φίλον νομίζειν, Σόλων λέγει, Βέλτιον εἴη ἂν τοὺς οἴκοι ἔχειν φίλους.

Εχ. 30. δ 'Αλέξανδρος άγγέλους επεμπε καλ εκέλευε τον Φωκίωνα τάλαντα εκατον δώρον λαμβάνειν. δ δε Φωκίων εκέλευε τους άγγέλους λέγειν τι δ 'Αλέξανδρος το δώρον πέμπει. επεὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι ελεγον ὅτι δ 'Αλέξανδρος κρίνει Φωκίωνα μόνον εν ταῖς 'Αθήναις καλὸν καὶ ἀγαθὸν, ὁ Φωκίων λέγει, Έγώ εἰμι τοιοῦτος ὅτι οὐ δῶρα λαμβάνω.

¹ It is believed that the beginner will find no difficulty in translating these stories, though he may not understand the formation of some of the inflected words which are used.

Εχ. 31. ἔκαστος τῶν θεῶν τέχνην ἔχει. ὁ γὰρ ᾿Απόλλων προλέγει, ὁ δὲ ᾿Ασκλήπιος ἰατρός ἐστιν, ὁ δὲ ὙΕρμῆς διδάσκει παλαίειν ἱ, οἱ δὲ Διοσκοῦροι σώζουσι τοὺς ναύτας ἀθλίους ἐν τῆ θαλάσση, οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι ἄλλας τέχνας ἔχουσιν.

Εχ. 32. ἔκαστος ἄνθρωπος δύο πήρας * φέρει, τὴν ἔμπροσθεν * τὴν δὲ ὅπισθεν *. καὶ κακῶν ἑκατέρα ἐστὶ πλήρης. ἡ μὲν ἔμπροσθεν ἄλλων τὰ κακὰ φέρει, ἡ δὲ ἔτέρα τὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου αὐτοῦ. οὕτως οἱ ἄνθρωποι τὰ ἑαυτῶν κακὰ οὐ βλέπουσι, τὰ δὲ ἄλλων πάνυ γυγνώσκουσιν.

Εχ. 33. λόγος έστιν ώς ἄνθρωπος δς ἔφευγεν οἴκοθεν φονεὺς, ἥκει κατὰ τὸν Νεῖλον. ἀλλὰ λέων ἐκεῖ ἦν, καὶ τὸν τόπον φόβφ λείπει καὶ ἐπὶ δένδρον ἀναβαίνει. ἐν δὲ τῷ δένδρφ ἐστὶ δράκων. πάλιν οὖν ἐλαύνει εἰς τὸν ποταμόν, ἐν δὲ τῷ ποταμῷ ἦν κροκόδειλος δς πάνυ ἐσθίει. ἡ γὰρ γῆ καὶ ὁ ἀὴρ καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ μισοῦσιν ὅστις φονεύς ἐστιν.

Ex. 34. It is now (the) middle of the day, and the sun is very warm. The shade of the trees is pleasing, and the sea is beautiful. And there is a boat . Three sailors are in the boat. One sailor sleeps ; and the others do not see the danger before (them). For a rock is in the sea, and the boat is near the rock. But they escape the danger.

Ex. 35. I have a horse. Formerly he was strong, but now he is wretched and worthless. Do you listen while I tell the cause. Thieves stole the corn of the horse, so-that he had nothing (lit. not) to eat. But now I have a first-rate contrivance. I mix small stones with the corn. The horse as he eats leaves the stones; but the thieves steal the stones with the corn. Thus it is easy to find the guilty (ones).

Ex. 36. Here was a horse in a terrible danger. The other horses were not able (lit. powerful) to release their companion; for the master alone is able to do (it), and was not at-home. But among the horses was one very wise; and he ran up-to the house, and with his head knocked (at) the door. Thus the mischief was manifest to the master, and he saved his horse.

Ex. 37. There was once a master who had a brick of gold. One of the slaves stole the brick, but the master knew not the thief. But there was a wise judge in the district, and among the slaves there was great fear of the judge. Therefore the judge orders the slaves to listen-to his words, and said, The thief has a leaf on his head. And while the others keep (lit. have) quiet, the thief quickly shook, his head.

Ex. 38. Men should not consider the gods harsh and terrible foes, and so worship (them) in fear; but should sacrifice to-them (airois) as good and just, and trust them as wise and powerful friends. Thus would the gods hear the prayers of men and receive their sacrifices.

The Egyptians thought the sun and moon gods; the Persians considered fire a god; but we know that God is spirit, and men must worship him (αὐτόν) in spirit and in truth.

VII. THE CONSONANT DECLENSION.

36. Uncontracted Nouns.

Case-endings, etc., Gr. 133 (163). Read App. 8.

1. Masculines and Feminines.—Paradigms from labial or palatal stems, Gr. 174; from lingual stems, Gr. 176; from liquid stems, Gr. 184 (cf. 550, -τηρ, -τορ- only).

EXPLANATIONS.—For $\phi \lambda \epsilon \beta \delta s$, etc., Gr. 172; $\gamma \epsilon \rho \omega \nu$, $\pi o \iota \mu \dot{\eta} \nu$, etc., Gr. 168, 2; other points, Gr. 169, 177-180 (cf. 172, Exc.). Contrary to Gr. 179 b, forms illustrating Gr. 179 may be considered mere imitations of nouns from stems in ι and ν , seen in Gr. 201; which they accidentally resemble in the nominative case. The vocatives $\pi o \iota \mu \dot{\eta} \nu$, $\partial a \dot{\iota} \mu o \nu$, etc., illustrate App. 9, (4).

It should be noticed that Gr. 55 d is the rule, except for the dative plural.

2. Neuters.—Paradigms, Gr. 181. Inflect also γάλα, ὕδωρ (Gr. 182 a), φῶς (Gr. 183, cf. 172, Exc.).

EXPLANATIONS.—Formation, Gr. 167, 182, 183; 553, 1: accent. Gr. 546.

Compare inflection of I. judex with $\phi i\lambda a \xi$, princeps with $\phi \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \psi$, miles with $\chi \dot{a} \rho is$, soror with $\dot{\rho} \dot{\eta} \tau \omega \rho$, tibicen with $\pi o \iota \mu \dot{\eta} v$, caput with $\sigma \dot{\omega} \mu a$, lac with $\gamma \dot{a} \lambda a$.

37. Accent of Uncontracted Nouns.

Monosyllabic stems are oxytone in the theme (commonly), if they make the accusative singular in α ; and perispomenon, if they make it in ν .

With reference to the accent of derivatives which are treated in Gr. 548-569, notice the last statement of 546.

Ex. 40. God is a spirit. Plato calls men the possessions of the gods. The boys shall learn their letters. The love of riches is (the) cause of terrible evils. Flatterers are odious to the wise. A dragon was guarding the fruits of the Hesperides. The rulers should be guardians of the laws. Babylon was the prize of war to the Greeks. The Persians consider (lit. the) fire a divinity. The Athenians were the saviours of Greece.

Ex. 42. I see the figure of a lion. The herald's name was Talthybius. Plato called time the image of eternity. Anaximěnēs considered air (to be) the principle (lit. beginning) of the universe. The soldier might, indeed, set-fire-to the wood, but the watchman would see the flame and signal with his trumpet. The opinions of the barbarians were a laughing-stock (lit. laughter) to the Greeks. The bird was bringing food for her young in her mouth. The Chimaera of the poets had a wonderful figure, being both a lion and a dragon and a she-goat. May the ambitious orators not ruin the affairs of the citizens. Let the citizens give (lit. have) thanks to their saviour Sölön.

Contracted Nouns.

- 39. The following classes include the more important varieties of contracted nouns:
 - I. Stems in ι and ν .
 - II. Stems in a diphthong.
 - III. Stems in s and T.

The Attic dialect prefers the contracted forms. The uncontracted forms, which are given to show how these originated, are found in the old Greek of Homer and the Ionic dialect of Herodotus.

Note.—Before taking up contracted words of the Third Declension, those of the First and Second Declensions should be noticed. 40. Contraction in general, Gr. 37, 39. See also § 7, Rem. Accent is not affected by contraction, except as stated in § 7.

Special Rules of Contraction.—I. In Decl. I., and the dual and plural of Decl. II., contracted words preserve the final sounds of uncontracted words, and differ from them in accent only.

II. Simple contracts (Gr. 540) in -ovs and -ovv are uniformly perispomena, except in the nominative dual $(Gr. 158 \ a)$; compounds follow Gr. 158 b.

Contracted paradigms of Decl. I. and II., Gr. 144, 157.

41. Stems in , and v.

Formation and inflection, Gr. 201, 204. Read App. 10.

The shorter acc. plur., $\mu \hat{v}s$, etc., are formed in the regular way; as, $\mu \hat{v}s = \mu v \nu s$, Gr. 55, and not a contraction from $\mu \hat{v}as$.

Compare inflection of L. turris and gradus with $\pi \delta \lambda \iota s$ and $i \chi \theta \iota s$.

REMARK.—The change of o to ω, seen in the gen. sing. of this and the following classes, is found, also, in Attic forms of certain words of Decl. II., Gr. 159, 162 (cf. 160).

42. Stems in a Diphthong.

Formation, inflection, etc., Gr. 206-210; 557, 1; 560, 1: accent, Gr. 129 a.

REMARK.—The Homeric inflection (Gr. 206 D) suggests that the vowel-lengthening in certain cases of words in $-\epsilon \nu s$ (Gr. 208 b, c) may be compensative for loss of $\nu = F$.

REMARK.—Stems of this class in ϵv seem to have originally ended in ϵF ; hence the acc. sing. and plur. are perfectly regular, $-\epsilon \bar{a}$ and $-\epsilon \bar{a}s$ for $-\epsilon Fa$ and $-\epsilon Fas$. The Vau became v when not followed by a vowel; cf. the corresponding interchange of Lat. u and v.

Stems in ov, av, oι are inflected in Attic as vowel-stems; hence βοῦς, γραῦς, ναῦς, οἶς—all acc. plur.—are for βου-νς, γραυ-νς, ναυ-νς, οἰ-νς, according to Gr. 55. But in Homer all except οἶς are inflected as consonant-stems; cf. Gr. 206 D.

43. Stems in - \sigma- and -F-.

1. Formation and inflection of nouns from stems in -εσ- and -ασ-, Gr. 191; 190, 192, 195 (183).

For γένεσι, from γενεσσι, Gr. 62.

All masculine nouns from stems in $-\epsilon \sigma$ - are proper names; Gr. 193, 194.

Compare the inflection of L. genus (for genes), gen. generis (for genesis), with γένος, gen. γενε(σ)ος.

- 2. Formation and inflection of nouns from stems in -oσ-, Gr. 196; cf. also 196 D.
- 3. Formation and inflection of nouns from stems in -F-, Gr. 197-199.

Ex. 44. The actions must be signs of character. The knights could not defend the citadel. Philoctētēs was lamenting the pain of his wound. The parents of Achilles were king Pēleus' and the goddess Thětis. The herdsmen were wondering-at the size and weight of the snake. His base gains should be a reproach to the seer. The brave (man) keeps his rank, but the coward leaves (it). The sport and laughter of his children should relax the frown (lit. loose the brow) even of the Stoic. The murderer contrives (εὐρίσκω) a loosing of his fetters. The diction must increase the beauty and power of the poetry.

The good painter must signify the nature of the man in his likeness; he must paint the speed of the runner, and the boldness of the soldier, and the wisdom of the philosopher. Wonderful is the power of faith and hope. The acquiring of knowledge and prudence is the aim of life to the philosopher. We must learn the form of the body by the sight. The customs of strangers are a cause of laughter to the mob and of learning to the wise. Achilles could not escape the bow and the dart of Paris. The goddesses assign to the shepherd the decision of beauty. Cyrus was the king of a powerful nation.

45. Irregular Nouns of the Third Declension.

The following are the most important of the irregular nouns whose peculiarities have not been already noticed. In some of these certain analogies come to the surface, while others can be explained by very simple changes of sound. It may be noticed, also, that these words are chiefly "every-day" words, and most likely to show extensive phonetic corruption from long and constant use.

Words may be heteroclitic, Gr. 212; heterogeneous, Gr. 214; defective, Gr. 215; metaplastic, Gr. 213 $(\pi \hat{v} \rho)$. See also Gr. 168 b; 216, 2-6, 10, 12, 15, 17, 20.

Zeús, for $\Delta \iota \varepsilon \nu s,$ illustrates Gr. 68. On accent of oùs, see Gr. 172, Exc.

Inflection of stems in $\epsilon \rho$, Gr. 188, 189.

EXPLANATIONS.—For the omission of ϵ in the stems in $\epsilon \rho$, cf. Eng. brethren for bretheren, L. patres for pateres, Gr. 43; for the insertion of δ , the forms tender, gender, from L. tener, gener, through the French.—"Prim. Phil.," cap. i., 36.

Minerva bore in her hand a long spear. Dēmosthenes used-to-drink water only, but Aeschines (drank) wine. Let the rulers assign honors to the priests of Jupiter. The fool (lit. foolish) is-a-slave to his belly, but the mind of the wise is master of his body and of his passions. May the light of the morning not bring new pains to the wretched. The boys shall strike (κόπτω) the ball with hand or foot. The ambassadors of the barbarians might bend their knees and worship the king, but the Greeks must remain upright. We close the way of the breath with our tongue and teeth, and produce sounds (the) sign of our thought. The noble virgin has her modesty (as) an ornament and safeguard. The rock has a clear echo. The city of Athens was small, but her citizens performed (lit. did) illustrious deeds. A few soldiers of the Greeks might rout a whole army of the Persians. The Athenians, the saviors of Greece, guarded their country bravely.

VIII. Adjectives of the Imparisyllabic Declension.

47. Uncontracted Adjectives.

Nouns from consonant-stems in Decl. III. are commonly paroxytone.

Paradigms from stems in -v-, Gr. 235.

Paradigms from stems in -v7-, Gr. 240. To these έκών also must be added; originally a participle, and hence inflected like λύων (Gr. 242).

Two irregular adjectives, μέγας and πολύς, Gr. 247. Some adjectives have but one termination, Gr. 246.

Explanations.—In general, Gr. 228. For stems in -v-, Gr. 233, 234. For stems in - $\nu\tau$ -, Gr. 237, 239 (129 a); $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a =$ πανσα = πανσσα = παντ-ια, Gr. 67.

The meaning of $\pi \hat{a}s$ is somewhat dependent on its position in the phrase to which it belongs; Gr. 672. Some grammars give no dual to $\pi \hat{a}s$, for reasons which would seem to be obvious.

The meaning of the suffix -ept-, Gr. 567.

The stem $\pi \circ \lambda \lambda \circ$ is connected with $\pi \circ \lambda \upsilon$ through $\pi \circ \lambda \mathcal{F} \circ \circ$, by assimilation.

48. Contracted Adjectives.

Paradigm for stems in -v-, Gr. 229. Paradigm for stems in -εσ-, Gr. 230.

Explanations.— $\dot{\eta}\delta\epsilon\hat{\iota}a=\dot{\eta}\delta\epsilon\mathcal{F}\iota a$ from $\dot{\eta}\delta\nu$ - ιa ; see App. 10. For other points, Gr. 231.

REMARK 1 .- We find contracted adjectives belonging to Decl. I. and II.: as άπλοῦς, άπλη, άπλοῦν from άπλόος, άπλόη (Gr. 222 a), άπλόον; so also αργύρεος, αργυρούς, and χρύσεος, χρυσούς, Gr. 223 (566). For peculiarities of contraction and accent, see § 40.

REMARK 2.—A few words in -ws follow the Attic Declension; as ιλεως, Gr. 226.

IX. Comparison of Adjectives.

50. Forms of the Comparative and Superlative Degrees.

Formation, etc., Gr. 248, 249, 253; 236.

Learn the comparison of the following: φίλος, γεραιός, παλαιός, εὐδαίμων, as found in Gr. 250, 251.

The noun πρέσβυς gives πρεσβύτερος, πρεσβύτατος. Cf. Gr. 216, 17.

Many of the commonest adjectives form the comparative and superlative irregularly, either from employing different stems (as in Latin, bonus, melior, optimus; malus, pejor, pessimus; in English, good, better, best; bad, worse, worst); or from what is called the principle of euphony, harsh sounds being soonest worn away and unimportant syllables slurred over, in words of most frequent use. Cf. Gr. 254, 255.

Special Rule of Accent.—The accent of all forms in the comparative and superlative degrees is always recessive.

- 51. Syntax of the Degrees of Comparison.
- 1. The use of the comparative implies a comparison between two things. The word expressive of the second thing may be joined to the comparative (as in Latin) either (1) by a conjunction ($\tilde{\eta} = \text{quam}$) without change of construction; or (2) when the first member of the comparison is in the nominative or accusative case (see the examples in Gr. 643 a, b), the conjunction may be omitted and the second member of the comparison put in the genitive (= the Latin ablative).

The latter member of the comparison may be omitted both in Greek and Latin, and the comparative then acquires a sort of positive force; e.g., juventus est natura vehementior, ἡ νεότης ἐστὶ φύσει ὀξυτέρα, youth is naturally somewhat (or too) vehement, lit. more vehement (than the ordinary standard of vehemence). This use attaches itself especially to particular words, as νεώτερος, newer, younger, which comes to mean whatever is somewhat new or startling, and thus νεώτερον = innovation, revolution.—Gr. 649.

2. The superlative implies a comparison of several things, one of which it sets by itself as surpassing all the rest, Gr. 650 ¹.

The second member of the comparison is, however, sometimes omitted with the superlative as with the comparative. The superlative is then used as a sort of positive.—Gr. 650 b.

X. Pronouns.

53. Personal Pronouns.

ἐγώ, I (L. ego, egotism).
 σύ, thou (L. tu).
 oὐ, of him (L. sui).—Gr. 261, 262.

As in English and Latin, these old and well-worn words are very irregular. They are so intimately connected with ourselves that it was important to mark more clearly than in other words the relation they bore to the rest of the sentence; e. g., whether I, the speaker, am agent or patient, acting singly or in concert with others. For this reason we find in most languages that they borrow their inflections from a number of stems, as Lat. ego, me, nos; Fr. je, moi, nous; Ger. ich, mir, uns; Eng. I, me, us.

In Attic, the pronoun où, which stands for the 3d person, is used only in a special reflexive sense, its place being supplied by one or other of the demon-stratives, usually ὅδε, οὖτος, or ἐκεῖνος in the nominative, and αὐτός in the oblique cases. Even as a reflexive, it is far less common than the longer form ἐαυτοῦ. Cf. Lat. sui, sibi, etc.

Remark.— $\dot{\eta}\mu\hat{\iota}\nu$, $\dot{\nu}\mu\hat{\iota}\nu = \dot{\eta}\mu\epsilon - \iota\nu$, $\dot{\nu}\mu\epsilon - \iota\nu$; the same case-ending serving here for both dual and plural datives, since they may be distinguished by their different stems.

Possessive Pronouns.—Gr. 269; 675, 689.

55. Demonstrative Pronouns.

- I. The demonstrative pronouns may be described as—
- 1. The direct: $\delta\delta\epsilon$, this by me = L. hic; oùtos, this, or that, by you = L. iste (Gr. 698); $\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\hat{\imath}\nu\sigma$, that yonder = L. ille.

2. The intensive: αὐτός, Gr. 678-680.

The indirect: αὐτός (in oblique cases), Gr. 682.
 Inflection of ὅδε and οὐτος, Gr. 271, 272.

Inflection of ἐκεῖνος, Gr. 271 4; of αὐτός, Gr. 265.

Illustrating the several uses of advos, put the following sentences into Greek: I myself see the same man. These are the same (things). Do you see him? We see them and their friends.

Note.—Observe the inferiority of the Greek to the Latin in respect to pronouns of this kind, airós being used in three distinct senses.

II. The word ἄλλος, other (L. alius), which is generally classed with the pronouns, is declined like αὐτός (ἄλλος, -η, -ο, etc.); with the article it acquires the meaning of L. ceteri. Cf. also Gr. 704 a, 705.

Originally the neuter of adjective pronouns had a termination, τ , corresponding to the d of Latin, id, illu-d, quo-d; so that $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda o$ is identical with aliu-d, Gr. 86.

έκαστος, each = L. quisque, and ἐκάτερος, either = L. uterque, follow the regular adjective declension. Their meaning and use are obvious from their terminations, Gr. 296, cf. 673 a.

56. Syntax.—Notice a peculiarity in the position of the article when used with a demonstrative pronoun. According to the rule for the attributive, r.

the pronominal adjectives οὖτος, ὅδε, ἐκεῦνος, αὐτός should be placed between the article and the substantive when they have an attributive force. On the contrary, we find them placed in the order which properly denotes the predicative use, as οὖτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὖτος this man, Gr. 673. Probably the origin of this is, that the demonstrative was looked upon as a substantive in apposition with another substantive, so that the literal translation would be "this one (I mean) the man," "the man (I mean) this one." Cf. also page 22, foot-note, and Gr. 674.

57. Reflexive and Reciprocal Pronouns.

The reflexive pronouns are compounded of the personal pronouns and the demonstrative αὐτός, Gr. 266, 683. Concerning other forms, οῦ and ε, Gr. 685.

The reciprocal pronoun ἀλλήλων, of each other, is formed by a sort of reduplication of ἄλλος, Gr. 268; cf. L. alius alium = one another. On the quantity of the penult, Gr. 34.

59. Interrogative and Indefinite Pronouns.

As in Latin, there is one form for the simple interrogative and the simple indefinite; $\tau\iota\varsigma = quis$, Gr. 277; also 119 a. The stem $\tau\iota$, like the stem $\tau o\lambda v$, by the addition of a vowel passed into the O-declension. $\tau\iota o$ afterward became $\tau \varepsilon o$, and by contraction $\tau o v$. Thus the forms in () are explained. Cf. Gr. 277 D.

63. Correlative Pronouns.

The interrogative, indefinite, demonstrative, and relative pronouns which we have treated of so far, are all of the highest degree of generality, referring to the idea of bare existence; but the same pronominal framework, so to speak, is applicable to less abstract ideas, such as those of quantity, quality, duality, etc. Thus the interrogative τl , what, assumes nothing beyond the existence of the indefinite τl , something, and puts no limit to the answer expected except that it must denote a something (in metaphysical language, a substance); but the interrogative $\pi \acute{o}\sigma o\nu = L$. quantum, assumes the existence of something possessed of size (the indefinite $\pi o\sigma \acute{o}\nu$), and limits the answer expected to a statement of this size.

The following scheme gives the pronouns classified under the heads mentioned. The student will do well to associate constantly the Greek with the corresponding Latin.

It will be observed that the interrogatives belong to a root πo , the demonstratives to a root τo , and the relatives to a root δ . These roots will appear more important when we come to adverbs.

66. General Remarks on the Pronouns.

No part of grammar is more interesting to the philologer than the pronoun. Not only is it of great value for exhibiting the connection of different languages, but it opens up a most important line for investigation respecting the origin of inflections generally. According to what is now the generally received opinion, we find here, in their least disguised form, the elements of nominal and verbal inflections, as well as of the majority of numerals and prepositions. To show this in detail belongs to more advanced grammar. We can only notice here that the demonstrative is the earliest form of pronoun, and that the others have been gradually developed out of it.

Thus the 1st person would originally mean "this one here," as we find even in later Greek $\delta\delta\epsilon$ $d\nu\eta\rho$ used as a periphrasis for $\epsilon\gamma\omega$; the 2d person would mean "this one near," as we find in later Greek δ $o\nu\tau$ os' used for $\sigma\nu$; the 3d person is still supplied by a demonstrative.

Again, δ , $\dot{\eta}$, $\tau \dot{\delta}$, which becomes in later Greek the article, or "distinctive pronoun" (as it has been called), is used by Homer either as a demonstrative or personal pronoun, or as a relative; and there are traces remaining in Attic of both these uses, particularly of the demonstrative use in the phrases $\dot{\delta}$ $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \nu$, $\dot{\delta}$ $\delta \dot{\epsilon}$, the one, the other (lit. he on the one side, he on the other side). The development of the article out of the demonstrative may be illustrated by the French le, from L. ille.

The relative ős, ŋ, ő was originally the same as ⁴ The same in substance of meaning, but different in origin.

¹ Thus the old forms $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\mu\dot{\epsilon}$, $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\sigma\dot{\epsilon}$, $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\epsilon}$ (§ 21), are respectively made up of the stem $\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma$ joined to $\mu\epsilon$, the stem of the 1st person, to $\sigma\epsilon$ the stem of the 2d person, and to the demonstrative root $\tau\dot{\epsilon}$.

² Gr. 653; ³ 698, δ, ή, τό, and had a demonstrative force, of which the Attic still preserves traces in particular phrases. This connection between the demonstrative and relative is illustrated by the double force of the English that, as in the verse, "Who is he that will harm you if ye be followers of that which is good?" and the German der, which is article, demonstrative, and relative in one.

The connection of the relative and interrogative is plainly shown by the Latin qui, quis, and Eng. who; that of the interrogative and indefinite by all the Greek examples given, and by the Lat. quis, si-quis, ali-quis.

XI. Numerals 1.

67. Memorize first ten of each list, Gr. 288; and inflections of Gr. 290. Read Gr. 296, 297.

¹ The etymological connection of the greater part of the numerals in Greek, Latin, and English is generally evident at once. Where the connection is less obvious, as in $\tau \acute{\epsilon} \sigma \sigma a \rho \epsilon_{f}$, quatuor, four, it is conclusively shown by a further examination of the allied forms in others of the Indo-European languages. Thus we find in Greek a dialectical form $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \sigma c \rho \epsilon_{f} = \tau \acute{\epsilon} \sigma c \rho \epsilon_{f}$, and again in Latin a dialectical form petora = quatuor, from which we obtain the equation,

$$au \epsilon \sigma \sigma a ho \epsilon \varsigma = \left\{egin{array}{l} \pi i \sigma v ho \epsilon \varsigma \ ext{or} \ petora \end{array} ight\} = q u a t u o r.$$

And that an original Indo-European word may appear in one dialect with qu, in another with p, and in a third with t, is evident from examples which we have already met with in the course of this book; thus:

$$τις$$
 = quis = Dialectic $πος$ or $κος$ (cf. Hd. Gr. 278 D), $τε$ = que,
 $πέντε$ = quinque = Dialectic $πέμπε$ (Gr. 288 D, Acolic), quotus = $πόσος$,
εσινιν = $iππος$.

The same variations are frequently observable in a child's first attempts to pronounce k or qu.

The connection of the English four may be exhibited in another equation taking in the Welsh and the Gothic, thus:

Thales was one of the wise men of Greece. The thirty tyrants were more unjust and violent than the mob, and slew more citizens. Clearchus had (lit. there were to C.) more than forty Thracians and horsemen. The height of the wall was one hundred feet. Ex. 68. An Olympiad (ὀλυμπιάς) is a period of four years, or of fifty Greek months. There are many causes of disease, but one of the greatest is an unrestrained manner-of-living. Inachus was the first king of Argos, Pělasgus was the second, Danaus the (son) of Bēlus the third. Sardanapalus was the thirtieth and last king of the Assyrians. In descent and in natural endowment (lit. nature) Alcibiades was inferior to (lit. than) no one of the Athenians. No one was more noble than Philŏpoemen, whom Plutarch calls the last of the Greeks. The first year of the 108th (lit. eighth and hundredth) Olympiad was the last of the life of Plato. The whole time of the journey was a year and three months.

XII. ADVERBS.

69. Formation of Adverbs.

Correlative adverbs may be found in Gr. 283.

70. Some Hints on Syntax.

The adverb often stands for an attributive adjective, Gr. 600, 666 c; as ὁ νῦν τρόπος, the modern fashion. Compare the phrase, "the then parliament."

The substantive may be omitted if it is one which readily suggests itself to the mind; as oi $\tau \acute{o} \tau \epsilon$, the (men) of that time; oi $v \acute{v} v$, the (men) of the present day. In the same manner the substantive may be omitted after an attributive genitive; as \acute{o} $K\acute{v}\rho ov$, the (son) of Cyrus; $\tau \grave{a}$ $\tau \mathring{\eta} s$ $\pi \acute{o} \lambda \epsilon \omega s$, the (affairs) of, i. e., all that concerns, the city; $\tau \grave{a}$ $\tau o \mathring{v}$ $\pi o \lambda \acute{e} \mu o v$, the events of the war. Compare "St. Paul's" (church), L. "ad Vestae" (aedem). Read headings of Gr. 621, and 730 a, b.

The verbs ἔχω and πράσσω are often used intransitively² with adverbs; as εὖ ἔχω, I am in a good condition; εὖ ἔχει, it is well; εὖ πράσσω, I fare well, Gr. 810. So εὖ πάσχω, I am well treated; κακῶς πάσχω, I am ill treated. Εὖ λέγω (lit. I say well) and εὖ ποιῶ (lit. I do well) are used as single words governing an accusative case, with the meanings "I praise," "I benefit," cf. Gr. 712, 820.

The genitive and dative of some words have often merely adverbial force: as, où where, έργφ really.

Ex. 70. Verily the many words of fools are wearisome to the wise. Opportunity tries (κρίνω) friends as the fire (does) gold. Truly even the bold fly when they see death already near. Yesterday the shepherd was leading his sheep homeward, to-day he sacrifices to the gods, to-morrow morning (lit. early) his journey must be again from home. Why are you come hither, and from whence, O Socrates? And yet this affair must be the cause of blows to the slave, for his master is envious and crabbed. Homer says that' the (men) before were much stronger than the (men) at-that-time. Where is now that virtue and that great soul which was once (the characteristic) of the Greek? The city from whence you are, O young men, is the greatest and most illustrious of all, the mother of freedom and philosophy; be not, then, ignorant and slaves.

Whoever simply tells the truth and shows his own honest (ἀπλοῦς) judgment, him, O Athenians, you should consider the best orator. While it is still light we must each do our tasks (ἔργον), but at night let us enjoy (ayw) leisure, and may there be much sport and laughter of old and young together. Certainly Socrates always did the work of a good citizen well and manfully (ἀνδρείως), both at Athens and elsewhere; at-all-events he did not leave his rank when the others (did), but remained there on the spot, and at home he alone observed (φυλάσσω) the laws. XIII. Verbs in -ω. Active Voice. Formation of Tenses.

72. Since every action may be past, present, or future, and may be viewed as a process, a completed act, or a mere undefined act (§§ 19; 27, 2), it is evident that a verb which is faultless in its inflection will show at least nine tense-formations in the indicative mood. Greek is deficient in two, as will be seen by referring to Gr. 823; the present and future serving as both acristic (Gr. 822 b) and imperfect tenses. There are, however, but six tenses regularly inflected in the active voice; Gr. 301 (302 b).

Tenses which represent the action as a process, may also suggest the inception, or details, or habit of action; those which state the mere fact, may also suggest the action taken as a whole, or the single act, or even the finished act. Thus Gr. 824, 825, 836, 837; 851.

Of course, it must depend on the view taken by the writer what tense he shall employ.

73. Verbs may be divided into three conjugations, according to the final letter of the stem; we have, therefore, mute verbs, pure (or vowel) verbs, and liquid verbs.

74. Future Active of Mute and Vowel Verbs.—Formation, etc., Gr. 420, 421. Paradigm, Gr. 315.

For additional practice, the synopses in Gr. 337-341, 344-348 (426 D) may be used.

REMARK.—The reason for no subjunctive or imperative in the future tense is obvious. All that such forms could denote is expressed by other tenses of these moods. For the same reason the future infinitive is rare, and the future optative of little use.

75. Acrist Active of Mute and Vowel Verbs.—Paradigm, Gr. 316. Formation, etc., Gr. 428, 429.

For additional practice, the synopses in Gr. 327-341, 345-348 may be used.

Explanations.—See Gr. 389 c, 433, 434. In the aor. opt., the mood-suffix appears as $\iota \alpha$ and $\iota \epsilon$, as well as ι .

Not the best part of the citizens are going on this expedition. The Syracusans conquered the Athenians and obtained great glory. The contrivances of the enemy will rather frighten than hurt the soldiers.

77. Future Active of Liquid Verbs.—Formation, etc., Gr. 422. Paradigms, Gr. 326, 342. Liquid futures contract according to rules given in Gr. 37, 39.

Explanation.—To retain the characteristic of the liquid stem, the law of Gr. 55 d was evaded by inserting a euphonic ϵ after the liquid. Thus $\phi a \nu \sigma \omega$ becomes $\phi a \nu \epsilon \sigma \omega = \phi a \nu \epsilon \omega = \phi a \nu \hat{\omega}$.

78. Aorist Active of Liquid Verbs.—Formation, etc., Gr. 431 (omitting b). Paradigms, Gr. 327, 342.

Explanations.—In liquid agrists, the law of Gr. 55 d was superseded, as it were, by that of Gr. 46. Thus ἐφανσα became ἔφαννα (cf. Gr. 431 D, d); which became in Attic ἔφηνα (Gr. 34).

REMARK.—It is one great advantage which the Greek and English verbs have over the Latin, that they possess distinct forms for the two different meanings of the Latin perfect; scripsi = I wrote or I have written.

Instances of reduplication are seen in Latin, as tetendi from tendo; also in English, as did from do.

REMARK.—1. The perfect imperative is found chiefly in preteritive verbs (Gr. 456); or to express a command that something be decisive or permanent; as, in English, "Begone."

2. The statement of Gr. 837 is especially true in the subjunctive and optative moods, which are rarely used in the perfect tense.

81. Second Aorist, and Second Perfect and Pluperfect.

Besides the common formation of the aorist and perfect, there is another which is found in some of the older verbs, differing from the former much as the old (sometimes fancifully called "the strong") preterite in English differs from the new (the "weak"); e. g., found, broke, contrasted with blinded, baked. It is seldom that both forms of the aorist and perfect belong to the same stem; but when this is the case they are either mutually supplementary (as in Gr. 432), or belong to different periods of the language, or there is usually some difference of meaning—the second aorist and perfect inclining to an intransitive or passive signification. This tendency of the older form to take an intransitive sense is observable in some of the English verbs which possess both forms of the preterite; e.g., awoke, awaked; hung, hanged; hove, heaved; clove, cleaved.

Formation, etc., Gr. 435; 450, 451 (a, b), 453; 455-458 (for reference only). Paradigms, Gr. 320, 321.

For additional practice, the synopses in Gr. 343 (451 c), 345 (365), 346 (452) may be used.

The second perfect is the regular formation for labial and palatal stems.

PASSIVE VOICE.

85. Formation of Tenses.

The tenses of the passive voice, as those of the active, are all formed from the verb-stem; but as the same modifications of the verb-stem appear in several of the tenses, it is convenient to consider these modications to be made once for all in some one tense, and to present the allied tenses as if formed from this; e.g., the pres. pass. from the pres. act., the perf. pass. from the perf. act., etc.

The brave will remain there where they have been placed, and will never leave their ranks. Men are often more injured by evil counsel than by weakness or cowardice. This is the place where Sophocles is buried (perf.). The occasion was such as shows who have been best educated, and who are the wisest and bravest. Of the Grecian poets, Homer and Aeschylus and Sophocles are most admired. Of the cities of Sicily, Naxos was first founded by the Chalcidians (Χαλκιδεύς), and afterward Syracuse by the Corinthians. When the youth was already all but (ὅσον οὐ) winning, he was tripped up, and the slower runner obtained the prize. When he was seized, the figure of Prōteús was often changed; at-one-time he appeared a bull, at-another a dog, at-another a bird. All things are sold at Athens; corn and sheep and wine and oil, and the voice of Aeschines. Since every vacuum (κενόν) is immediately filled up, the ancients said that a vacuum is hateful to nature. Then (ἄρα) envy is agreed by us (to be) a disease of the mind and a cause of pain to him who envies another. At Athens there was then great fear of sedition and revolution (πράγματα νεώτερα); all (things) were being moved and disturbed.

XV. MIDDLE VOICE.

90. Different Uses of the Middle.

The Greek verb has a third voice resembling the passive in many of its inflections; which is called the middle voice, as it partakes of the nature of both the others, Gr. 811-814.

Besides these principal uses, the middle has other idiomatic uses which must be learned by observation. In general, it may be said that the middle differs from the active, as it implies an interest in the action on the part of the agent, and thus gives a subjective character to what in the active is objective. Thus $\delta\rho l\zeta\omega$ is strictly "I limit by outward act" = "I mark out," but the middle $\delta\rho l\zeta\omega$ is "I limit to myself mentally" = "I define." In many cases, however, it is mere matter of usage whether the active or middle should be employed; just as in other cases it is difficult to decide whether the word employed is to be considered a middle or a passive. Several verbs have no middle voice, but supply its place by the active with the reflexive pronoun.

We find something analogous to the middle in the use of several Latin passives, such as vertor, I turn myself; fallor, I deceive myself; lavor, I bathe. It has even been maintained that this was the original force of the passive both in Latin and Greek, and that the common passive use is merely derivative, as in the case of the French and German reflexive verbs. Compare such phrases as "se manger," "se trouver," "se faire," "sich freuen." Cf. "Prim. Phil.," cap. v., 25–28.

91. Aorist and Future of the Middle.

The only forms peculiar to the middle voice in Greek are those for the agrist and future, and even the future is often used with a passive signification, Gr. 302, 496.

Formation, etc., Gr. 315, 316, 326, 327; 420, 422, 433.

Synopses, Gr. 337-340; 342-344; 346, 348. Note.—Before doing Ex. 89, 90, rend Gr. 815, 816.

Ex. 90. The goddess clung to the knees of Vulcan and entreated a gift. Why should Charmides have his son taught (to be) a good horseman, but not a good citizen? 3 He is such an one as would reverence neither his parents nor his king, but love and admire himself alone. He has never tasted true pleasure who has not shunned pleasure. The horsemen were next (lit. held themselves) to the hoplites. When we (had) bathed and anointed we began our dinner; but as soon as we tasted the wine which the barbarians brought, immediately we were all falling asleep. Anytus and Mělētus indicted Socrates, and persuaded the people that he was (lit. is) worthy of death . Frometheus was always benefiting mortals, but he could only procure pains and toils for himself (as) a reward for his humane disposition. The Syrians do not even yet forget the death of Adonis (st. Αδωνιδ), but still even now bewail him. 'We must ransom our friends whom the enemy are guarding, and at the same time let us recover the dead bodies. 'Iphicrates hired the army

Ex. 92. They never blamed themselves, but always thought the state or the laws or the rulers the cause of their own errors and troubles. There are those who think the gods harsh and terrible, and so pray to them as to enemies from fear; but there are those who think them kind and gracious, and pray to them piously as to wise and powerful friends. Men naturally follow and imitate their superiors, and lead and force their inferiors. We not only use our senses, but we also enjoy their use. The enemy were reckoned (to be) not less than 10,000 hoplites. When he had reckoned (up) all the evils of life, the wretched man prayed-to the gods (for) death '. [Whether] is he worthy of greater punishment who forced the citizens or he who bribed them (lit. was persuading by money)? I never enjoyed anything more than this spectacle. In vain have we used sacrifices and prayed to the gods; they favor the enemy and do not hear our prayers. A mother said to her son, "This shield thy father always kept-safe (σώζω) for thee; do thou, therefore, keep it safe or die." Socrates used-to-examine what the mass of men assume to be manifest. For the most part men do not slander those whom they despise.

XVI. VERBS IN -µ.

94. The verbs in -\mu are comparatively few in number; but they belong to the most ancient roots, and for this and other reasons are considered to preserve the oldest forms of the Greek verbal inflections. Compare the Latin verbs sum and inquam, and Eng. am.

Formation of Tenses.
95. The verbs in -μι differ from verbs in -ω in the present, imperfect, and second agrist tenses; see also Gr. 311, 385.

The forms $l\sigma\eta\mu\iota$ ($\sigma\tau a$), $\tau l\theta\eta\mu\iota$ ($\theta\epsilon$), $l\eta\mu\iota$ ($\dot{\epsilon}$), illustrate Gr. 371; δείκνυμι and κεράννυμι, Gr. 402 e. But -vvv- is sometimes due to assimilation; as evvuu from έσ-νυμι, cf. L. ves-tis.

The tenses which follow the ω conjugation are formed from the verbal stem regularly, thus:

st. στα (στάω), fut. στήσω. st. $\theta \epsilon$ ($\theta \dot{\epsilon} \omega$), fut. $\theta \dot{\gamma} \sigma \omega$.

st. δο (δόω), fut. δώσω.

st. δεικ (δείκω), fut. δείξω.

Even in tenses which properly belong to the conjugation in $-\mu\iota$ we occasionally meet with forms which belong to the conjugation in $-\omega$, as if from $\tau\iota\theta\acute{e}\omega$, etc.

96. 1. Present, active and middle, of τίθημί, δίδωμι, ἴοτημι, δείκνυμι, ἵημι, Gr. 329-332, 476; with use of 414-419 for reference only.

2. Aorist, active and middle, of the preceding verbs, Gr. 333-335, 476; with use of 440-445 for reference only.

Note.—As δείκνυμι has no second agrist, the irregular ἔδυν is given as an example of second agrists in -υ-.

REMARK.—With regard to their meaning, ἔστην and ἔδυν illustrate the intransitive force of the second agrist; while the first agrists, ἐστησα and ἔδυσα, are transitive.

97. For tenses inflected after the "Common Form," see Gr. 349-352.

REMARK.—1. In ἴστημι, the perfect and pluperfect have the intransitive force; as ἔστηκα, I have taken my stand, am standing; ἐστήκη, I stood, was standing.

2. Besides the regular inflections of the perfect, we find shorter forms used in the dual and plural of $i\sigma\eta\mu$ and some other verbs; see Gr. 454.

It will be noticed that $\tilde{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\kappa a$ (for $\sigma\epsilon-\sigma\tau\eta\kappa a$) violates Gr. 365; also that $\tilde{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\mu$, $\tau(\theta\eta\mu)$, $\delta(\delta\omega\mu)$, do not follow Gr. 460 in the perfect middle, nor Gr. 469 in the agrist passive. $\epsilon \tau \epsilon \theta \eta \nu$ for $\epsilon \theta \epsilon \theta \eta \nu$ follows Gr. 73, c.

Ex. 96. Not only the water but even the wine was being frozen with the cold. There are (things) which can (lit. could) be more easily broken than bent. Let the children strew the way with roses and other Disease and pain will one day $(\pi o \tau \hat{\epsilon})$ extinguish that insolence of youth. This too is a proof that he is not strong, (lit. for) he does not eat his food with pleasure (ήδέως). When I was strong, O Athenians, said Nicias, I helped you much; but now disease and pain are wasting $(\phi\theta\epsilon l\rho\omega)$ my strength, and I must lie here altogether weak and helpless. Since the general does not give us what is just, we will all go home (adv.). Know this, then, that the gods will destroy him who has broken the oaths which he swore. In Thěaetētus, spirit and intellect and passion were finely mixed.

XVII. Moods.

99. Syntax of the Infinitive.

In general, Gr. 938, 943, 945, 958; 946.

REMARK.—Usually &στε, before the infinitive denoting result (Gr. 953), refers to some antecedent (σῦτως, etc.), expressed or understood, which denotes manner or degree. The adverbial force of the infinitive with &στε is thus distinguished from the predicative force of the finite moods with the same (Gr. 927).

103. Moods in Dependent Clauses.

REMARK.—1. It has been noticed already that the optative mood has the same personal endings as the secondary tenses; furthermore, in many of its uses the optative serves for an imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive, as it were (Gr. 881³). It must not be overlooked, however, that in Gr. 937 the optative is shown to be an oblique form of the indicative also.

The Greek subjunctive is not used in indirect discourse except where it would be used in the direct discourse; so that in changing a sentence from oratio recta to oratio obliqua, an indicative is never altered to a subjunctive.

Note.—Examples of final clauses and indirect discourse have been given already; only conditional sentences remain to be illustrated.

GREEK-ENGLISH VOCABULARY.

The references are to sections of the Grammar.1

The Vocabulary must not be expected to translate the Exercises. While, therefore, the sense of the words has been generally given with sufficient detail, the synonym most apt for a given case has been sometimes left for the student's selection. The force of particles, indeed, can be best learned only by attentive reading: see also the frequent references to the Grammar; and, for use in writing in Greek, cf. 849.

Proper names are not always given, especially when they can be obtained by substitution: as, Alcibiadēs = 'Αλκιβιάδηs.

Words connected in derivation with the Greek word which precedes them are italicized; when within brackets, they are not necessarily synonymous with it. The distinction between cognate and derived words is never to be overlooked. Thus water is cognate with $\tilde{v}\delta\omega\rho$, but hydrant is derived from it. It will be noticed that the aspirate of many Greek words is represented by s in corresponding Latin words, etc.: as, $\tilde{\epsilon}\xi$, $\tilde{v}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho$, $\tilde{v}\lambda\eta$ (st. $\dot{v}\lambda fa$) = sex, super, silva. The v of silva corresponds with the obsolete Digamma, 23 D; similarly, vinum, vicus, work (Ger. werk) correspond with ofvos, ofkos, $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\sigma\nu$.

It has been shown by Grimm that the same words when found in (1) Sanskrit, Greek, or Latin (classical), (2) Low German (as the English), (3) High German, exhibit three systematically varying forms, apparently suited in each case to the national preference. Thus, tres, drei, three.

Grimm's law is that an aspirate in the classical languages is represented by a middle mute in Low German (or English), and by a smooth mute in High German; a middle mute in the classical is represented by a smooth mute in the English (Low German), and by a rough mute in the High German; and a smooth mute in the classical is represented by a rough mute in the Low German, and by a middle mute in the High German.¹ Thus:

HIGH GERM.	Eng.	CLASSIC.
Tochter	Daughter	θυγάτηρ
[Pruodor]	Brother	φράτηρ, frater
[Karten]	Garden	Hortus

The words in brackets are in the old form.

There are, indeed, many exceptions, especially among words containing aspirate consonants. This arises in part from the degree to which the High Germans have assimilated their language to that of the Low Germans.

The importance of a knowledge of this law lies in the facts that:

- (1.) It prevents etymological guess-work. E. g., guess whole to be connected with δλοs, and you are wrong. Whole, hale, etc., are really akin to καλόs; and the Latin sol-lus, for instance, to δλοs.
- (2.) It helps to show original Aryan roots. E. g., caput shows that head has lost an original f. The Old Eng. is heafod, the Dutch hoofd, the Germ. haupt.
- (3.) It helps to show the original meaning of words that have changed their sense. E. g., to brook, i. e., to put-up-with, is akin to fruor, fructus, of which the root is frug, to enjoy. The O. Eng. brucan = to digest, to eat, to enjoy, to stomach, to endure, to brook.
- (4.) This varying of the consonant will not appear, of course, in words adopted directly into English from Greek and Latin. E. g., while $\pi a r \eta \rho$ appears as father, we have also patriotic; while caput appears as he(f)ad, we have also capital. "Prim. of Phil.," Appendix (1).
- ¹ Hence we shall find the English smooth mute corresponding to Greek middle; English middle mute to Greek aspirate; English aspirate mute to Greek smooth.

When a verb is followed by words in any other case than the accusative, the fact is shown in the proper case of res; thus δμολογῶ τί τινι, I agree somewhat with some one.

Nouns whose genitive is not shown are of the first or second declension; their inflection is thus sufficiently indi-The article written after a noun shows its gender.

It will be convenient to remember that a, a, and v are commonly short, especially in affixes and as connecting vowels of declension and conjugation. But cf. 130, 131, 190 c.

Language is an organic whole, in which all the parts fit into each other. Without a correct knowledge of stems, no rational theory of sounds or of the formation of words is possible; and even syntax can not be fixed upon a firm basis by any other method.—Curtius.

APPENDIX.

- 1. The "improper" diphthong illustrates the practice of allowing only two tone-places, or beats, to a syllable. For, when the first vowel was long, it of course required the time of both beats; and the second vowel, thus silenced, was subscribed.
- 2. "Both accent and quantity have, and must have, some play in all languages. So long as speech is dictated by thought and feeling, will men mark the more significant words and syllables with greater stress of voice. And so long as consonants remain solid, will it take a longer time to get over two of them in pronunciation than one. In Greek both accent and quantity were powerfully developed; so that whereas accent, the intellectual element, overbore quantity in prose, in verse quantity, the musical element, overbore accent."—Clyde.
- . "That accent in Greek never receded beyond the antepenult, shows that the Greeks felt the same difficulty in the utterance of a long train of syllables after their accent that we do."

GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF ACCENT.—In each word, the accent belongs to that syllable upon which the attention is most strongly fixed. Accent may, however, be (1) logical, (2) grammatical, or (3) rhythmical.

In the Greek, as in the other languages, the accent (1) originally belonged to the syllable containing the essential idea of a word—the radical syllable—or a prefix of composition defining it. But, in proportion as these became familiar, there was a tendency to throw the accent (2) upon that syllable which last modified the main notion, i. e., the affix or prefix of inflection. Compare γράφω, I write, with ἔγραφον, I was writing, γέγραφα, I have written, γραφή, the act of writing, γραφείον, the instrument of writing, γραφεύς, the person who writes, γραφικός, suited to writing; λιθόβολος, stoned, λιθοβόλος, throwing stones; μητρόκτονος, mother-killed, μητροκτόνος, mother-killing. On the other hand, any strengthening of the radical, or weakening of the formative part, would tend toward the contrary effect. Rhythmic accent (3) was determined by the number and quantity of the syllables of a word; Gr. 100 b, 129 a.

In illustration of the foregoing, it will be observed that neuters have recessive accent, Gr. 546; accent is also recessive in conjugation and comparison, § 50; in composition, the accent, though usually recessive, is really attracted by that part of the word which defines the other and gives its special significance to the compound. Cf. also Gr. 274, 387.

- 3. "In both vowel and consonant declensions, neuters have the accusative termination for the nominative case. Language utterly refuses the characteristic formation of the nominative to the neuter gender; evidently because the neuter, even when it assumes the position of the subject of the sentence, carries with it the notion of dependence distinct from the self-sufficience of the masculines. 'It came by post' is = 'it was sent by post'; but 'he came by the train' can not be paraphrased in the same manner." As we take inanimate things in the mass, neuters use an ending like the feminine singular for their plural sign, and take the verb in the singular.
- 4. It may be helpful to some to see the tenses grouped as follows:

VIEW OF ACTION.	TIME.	EXACT NAMES.
Incomplete (or indef.1).	Pres.	PresImpf. (or Aor.).
Incomplete.	Past.	Past-Imperfect.
Aoristic (or incomp.1).	Fut.	FutAor. (or Impf.).
Completed.	Pres.	PresPerfect.
Completed.	Past.	Past-Perfect.
Indefinite.	Past.	Past-Aorist.
	Incomplete (or indef.¹). Incomplete. Aoristic (or incomp.¹). Completed. Completed.	Incomplete (or indef.¹). Pres. Incomplete. Past. Aoristic (or incomp.¹). Fut. Completed. Pres. Completed. Past.

Illustrated with γράφω, Lat. scribo, the foregoing becomes:

γράφω	I am writing (or write),	L. scribo.
₹γραφον	I was writing,	L. scribcbam.
γράψω	I shall write (or be writing),	L. scribam.
γέγραφα	I have written,	L. scripsi.
ἐ γεγράφη	I had written,	L. scripscram.
ξγραψα	I wrote,	L. scripsi.

- 5. Greek like Latin, but unlike English, is synthetic; that is, it tacks on to a part of the word, which remains more or less unchanged, certain sounds to indicate the relations of the word (noun, verb, etc.) to other words; whereas we express these relations by separate words. Thus, φιληθήσομαι, amabor = I shall be loved. "It is important, however, to observe that no inflection is arbitrary; it is now certain that every inflection is the fragment of a once separable word, having its own distinct meaning. For instance, φιληθήσομαι, when analyzed, consists of five parts:
 - (1.) The stem φιλη.
 - (2) θ—the relic of the root dha, 'to do' or 'make.'
 - (3.) η —the representative of the root $ja = ire(\epsilon l\mu \iota)$, 'to go.'
 - (4.) σο—the future sign, which we see in εσομαι, eso (ero).
 - (5.) µai—the first personal pronoun, in obliq. case.

"The whole conception, therefore, is synthetically built up of the elements, There-will-be (σo) a going (η) to make (θ) me $(\mu a \iota)$ loved $(\phi \iota \lambda \eta)$. And among all the multitudinous forms assumed by the Greek and Latin verbs, there is not one that does not follow some definite and ascertainable law. Parsing, therefore, will lose much of its repulsiveness and difficulty, when it is once understood that the distorted shapes assumed by some words are not due to arbitrary license in the amalgamation of the different parts, but to well understood and regular laws of phonetic corruption."—Farrar's "Greek Syntax."

¹ The above quotation has been retained just as it stood in the old edition, though as to details it might be repudiated by the new school philologists; for it is still substantially correct as to the main point which it was intended to illustrate.

In other instances, too, the now questioned doctrine of the so-

- 6. Concerning the tense-signs—conveniently called class-signs in the present systems—it may be noticed:
- (1.) That the lengthening of the stem-vowel in verbs of Class 2d accords with the more extended view of the action in the present system, though phonology, inflection, and syntax may be all involved in it. Cf. Eng. bite, bit; rise, risen; gripe (Gothic greipa, st. grip), grip.
- (2.) It has been suggested that the ι of Class 4th comes from a root jd, meaning "to go"—cf. $\ell\ell\nu a\iota$, or, in the causal sense, the redup. $i\eta\mu\iota$, L. ja-cio; and we may perceive a link between the original sense of this element and its force as a mere tense-sign in the English phrase "to go a-begging" compared with the aoristic "to beg."
- (3.) The verb "stand," past "stood," is an instance from English of a formation of the present analogous to the nasal formations of Class 5th.

βαίνω (βα-ν-ι-ω, Gr. 519, 7) is an instance of pleonasm in formation, which may be observed also in the most widely distinct provinces of language. Compare $\pi \rho \dot{\omega} \tau \iota \sigma \tau o s$, a strengthened $\pi \rho \dot{\omega} \tau o s$.

- (4.) Class 6th is called the Inceptive Class. Usually the inceptive meaning consists essentially in the fact that the action comes to pass gradually; and we may, therefore, reasonably assume that this sense existed at an early period in those forms from which it seems to have disappeared. But the gradual realization and the repetition of an action are regarded by language as nearly akin; hence Gr. 493.
- (5.) Class 8th includes two principal divisions: Those the stems of which, though apparently different, can be connected phonetically; e. g., αἰρέω, ἔρχομαι, from the assumed roots Fap called old school has been allowed to remain, because no satisfactory and generally accepted substitute has yet been proposed. The recently published translation of Prof. Victor Henry's "Short Comparative Grammar of Latin and Greek" (Macmillan), however, furnishes a very convenient presentation of the researches of the last ten years, which have so revolutionized previous conclusions in Comparative Philology.

= $F\epsilon\lambda$, $\epsilon\rho = \epsilon\lambda$ respectively; and those in which two or more stems are combined into one verb; e. g., $\epsilon\sigma\theta$ i ω , $\delta\rho$ i ω . Gr. 539.

7. Words Classified.

An excellent method of fixing words in the memory is to group them according to derivation or meaning. Thus:

άγγελος	messenger	άδικος	unjust
άγγέλλω	I report	àSucla	injustice
αίσχρός	disgraceful	δρθός	u pr i ght
αίσχύνη	di s grace	δεξιός	Lat. dexler
*A0ηνâ	Athena	δοῦλος	slave
'Alipvai	Athens	δουλεύω	I am slave
Adquatos	Athenian	δυνατός	able, possible
άθλον	prize	δυνάστης	lord
åθλος	contest	Surac relas	sovereignty
ἄ θλιος	struggling	άδύνατος	unable, impossible άθλητή ς	contestant	Beós	god
άνθρωπος	man	0eá.	goddess
άνθρώπινος	human	DECOS	divine
φιλάνθρωπος	humane	₫θεος	godless
Hans	72	0éa	sight, view
άρχω	I begin	θαυμάζω	I wonder άρχή άρχαΐος	beginning, rule ancient	θαυμαστός	strange άρχικός	able to lead	output 105	act anys
		θάνατος	death
YΫ	land	θνήσκω	I die
γεωργόε	husbandman	θνητός	mortal
χώρα	country	άθάνατος	immo rtal
γράφω	I write	κλέπτω	I steal
γραφή	writing	κλέπτης	thief
δίκη	right	κλοπής	theft
gikaros	just	κρίνω	I judge
δικαιοσύνη	justice	крита	judge

¹ The class-signs often confer a transitive or causal force upon roots which are intransitive in the older tense-forms; as in πιπίσκω, ζοτημι, Gr. 500. Cf. L. sisto, sto; Eng. set fr. sit.

λείπω	I leave	σιγή	silence
λέγω	I speak	ήσυχία	quiet
Ιτακύος	word	σοφία	wise
γολο ς	large	σοφός	wisdom
μικρό ς	small	Σπάρτη	Sparta
	little	Σπαρτιάτης	Spartan
véos	new	στρατός	army
veavlas	youth	στρατηγός	general
AQH03	law	στρατιώτης	soldier
setro	lawless	τρέπω	I turn sotrifo	I consider	τρόπος	manner
gsotros	I assign	τρόπαιον	trophy
δπλον	weapon	φεύγω	I flee
δπλίτης	armed one	φυγή	flight
πλούτος	wealth	φίλιος	dear, friend
πλούσιος	wealthy	φίλιος	friendly
πόλεμος	war	φιλία	friendship
πολέμιος	hostile	χαίρω	I rejoice
έχθρός	unfriendly	τέρπω	I make joyou s

8. The use of a distinct form—the stem, of course—for the vocative is considerably limited. Few substantives or adjectives, except proper names, etc., are sufficiently employed in address to require a separate form for this purpose. Hence a distinct vocative case is scarcely found in the participle, pronoun, article, or numeral. In Dec. I. and II., where names or epithets of persons abound, we find distinct vocatives, except when euphony or rhythm forbids; but in Dec. III. few words have a distinct voc. case, and even these often employ the nominative instead. The mutilation of the stem that would sometimes occur were it employed as a vocative, would leave it scarcely intelligible; thus ἄνα as the voc. of ἄναξ means "O king"; but as the impv. of ἀνέστην, "up."

The tendency of the vocative to recessive accent is due to the absence of case-ending to attract the accent from its original place on the root or stem of the word; the natural tone of familiar address enhances this tendency in words of frequent use. Of, Gr. 147 c, 155 a, 185, 188; 216, 4.

9. In connection with the inflection and formation of words, much is said about euphonic changes.

"Speech is easiest and most agreeable when there is a due alternation of vowels and consonants, and no needless expenditure of breath; when successive sounds are so related to each other in respect to the organs used and the mode of using them, that the voice passes readily from one to another; and when words begin and end agreeably." Hence cuphonic changes are chiefly to avoid hiatus (the succession of distinct vowels without an intervening consonant), Gr. 75; to reduce the openness of vowels; and to "weaken, blend, and at last slough away sounds whose meaning is not vividly felt."

The seat of euphony, as we somewhat mistakenly term it, is therefore in the mouth and not in the ear; and it arises in the spontaneous and unconscious effort to do what is to be done with as much ease as is consistent with being intelligible. Different sounds are objected to by different peoples, and by different communities—even individuals—of the same people; yet it is true that all, or nearly all, of these difficulties may be traced to physiological defects or early training. It can be easily shown, too, that there is of necessity a general tendency to treat the same difficulty in substantially the same way 1; though there are also marked national preferences, as shown already in the illustrations of Grimm's law.—Whitney.

Among the different ways by which the principles of economy in speech operate, are the following:

(1.) Assimilation—Gr. 46-51, 53-55, 66, 67, 82; Eng. cobweb from cop-web, gospel from god-spell.

¹ Yet there are many inconsistencies in language. It is a comprehensive law that hard combinations of sound are more tolerable when they have arisen out of still harder combinations. Even from a due regard to clearness of meaning, language imposes certain limits on the changes of sound. It is our privilege, then, merely to account for the facts, not to enact—much less enforce—laws.

- (2.) DISSIMILATION—Gr. 20, 52, 463 a, 73; Eng. pilgrim from L. peregrinus.
- (3.) Compensation—Gr. 56, 74, 431; Eng. goose, orig. gos, from Ger. gans.

In the more frequent instances of phonetic compensation—for liquids—the omitted letters are closely allied to vowels, and, as they faded out of hearing, gradually increased the quantity of the preceding vowels.

- (4.) GRAVITATION—Gr. 170 a, 179, 185, 188; also § 22 R.* Gravitation may be defined as the tendency of sound to accentual centers. It is seen in the strengthening of accented and the weakening and final disappearance of unaccented syllables. It results in syncope, aphaeresis, and apocope. Examples in English are seen, perhaps, in the doubling of the consonant ending an accented syllable, as in controlled; and the contrary, as in paralleled.
- (5.) SYNOOPE-Gr. 43; Eng. wintry for wintery, monk for L. munec.
- (6.) APHAERESIS—Gr. 510, 10; that is, the dropping off of a sound at the beginning of a word. Eng. examples: diamond, Fr. diamant, fr. L. adamans; 'neath for beneath.
- (7.) APOCOPE-Gr. 79, 84 D; Eng. th' evening, riches for richesse, cf. largess.
- (8.) Analogy—Gr. 222 b; 508, 13. Analogy aims at uniformity, or conformation. Eng. examples: slept, orig. slep, but as if from sleeped; thus cleft is displacing clove; coud has become could, in imitation of should, would.
- (9.) PROTHESIS—Gr. 45; that is, the addition of sound at the beginning of a word. English examples: a nickname = an eke-name, adown = down.
- (10.) EPITHESIS—Gr. 87, 88, 88 D; that is, addition of sound at the end of a word. Eng. examples: awaken for awake, tyrant, L. tyrannus.
- (11.) EPENTHESIS—Gr. 60; that is, addition of sound within a word. Eng. examples: humble fr. L. humilis, tender fr. L. tener.
- (12.) METATHESIS—Gr. 64, 65; Eng. third for thrid (cf. three), nostrils for nosthirls.

- (13.) Antithesis, or substitution—Gr. 86, 81, 48, 168, and, with subsequent assimilation, 67-69; Eng. forlorn fr. forlosen (cf. lose), knives fr. knife, ti in nation, di in soldier, ci in fallacious.
- (14.) Anticipation-Gr. 253, 402 R.; Eng. lantern fr. L. laterna.
- (15.) Contraction—Gr. 14, a, c, d, 37-42, 76; Eng. McLeod = McLoud, creature (cf. create).
- (16.) (a.) Indistinct Articulation—Gr. 61, 62; Eng. (bet-st =) bes st = best.
- (b.) Lazy Articulation—Gr. 60, 70, 71; Eng. lend (cf.: loan with no d), scratch for orig. cratch, number fr. L. numerus.

The foregoing classes are not mutually exclusive; the Eng. illustrations show (8) as a variety of (10) in the case of slept, and of (11) in the case of could. In fact, classes (4) and (16) may account for many irregularities which have been more specifically described in other classes.—For further details cf. March's "Anglo-Saxon Grammar," Part I., Morris's "English Accidence," and "Prim. of Phil.," cap. i., viii. (16-25).

10. Stems in -i- and -v-, though readily adapting themselves to consonant inflection, were peculiar. If the i, or v, was long, it was split into a vowel and semi-vowel; as $i\chi\theta\bar{\nu}s$, gen. $i\chi\theta\bar{\nu}-Fos = i\chi\theta\bar{\nu}os$ (Gr. 44). But if the i, or v, was short, it was extended (Gr. 32), i becoming $\epsilon i = \epsilon j$, and v becoming $\epsilon v = \epsilon F$; as $\pi\bar{\omega}$ is, gen. $\pi\bar{\omega}$ is (Gr. 36). The interchange of quantity seems to have been so gradual as not to have disturbed the original accent (cf. Gr. 42). The ending -ws for -os in the gen. of v stems, as in $\bar{\alpha}\sigma\tau\epsilon\omega s$, must be due to analogy, as no examples of gen. in - ηos from such stems are known. The accent of $\pi\bar{\omega}$ imitates that of the gen. sing. $\pi\bar{\omega}$ iew. The dat. plu. makes $\pi\bar{\omega}$ ieri, not $\pi\bar{\omega}$ ieri is borrowed from the nom. plu. It must be added, however, that $\pi\bar{\omega}$ is and similar words seem to have shown declension as stems in -ī- or -ī-, according to the dialect; cf. Gr. 201 D.

Since $\mu \hat{vs}$, L. mus, is in fact from a stem in - σ -, the gen. $\mu v \hat{os}$ is for $\mu v \sigma os$, L. muris. But loss of σ (Gr. 71) in most of the case-forms makes the word appear to come from a stem in -v-; and the accusatives are formed accordingly.

Diphthongal stems in -v- (Gr. 206) seem to have originally shown a long vowel before the v; as $v\bar{a}vs$, Ionic $v\eta\bar{v}s$ (Gr. 206 D), etc. Wherever the v disappeared (Gr. 44), the long vowel remained at first undisturbed, as in gen. $v\eta\dot{v}s = v\epsilon\dot{\omega}s$ from $v\eta\bar{v}s$; otherwise it gradually shortened and ultimately blended with the v into a diphthong, as in nom. $va\bar{v}s$, etc. Analogy seems to have extended the shortening of the vowel before v—from the nom., for example, to other cases; hence $v\epsilon\dot{v}s$, etc., as well as $v\eta\dot{v}s$, etc. If stems in $-\epsilon v$ - have been shortened from earlier stems in $-\eta v$ —which has not yet been proved, however—they are, of course, explained as above; at all events $inn\dot{\epsilon}a = inn\dot{\gamma}a$ is no longer to be explained as showing compensative lengthening for loss of v = f.

11. Some Questions in Review.

- 1. When has γ the nasal sound? To what initial letters is the rough breathing always applied? Why? What letters have become obsolete; yet of what importance can they be to the beginner?
- 2. Classify the vowels, according both to quantity and quality of sound. Show the ambiguity of the question, How many vowels in Greek?

Distinguish a proper diphthong from an improper diphthong; give the Latin equivalents of the Greek diphthongs. Give the history and significance of iota subscript.

3. Classify the consonants and semi-vowels, according to both their origin and the quality of their sounds. Define the words "cognate" and "co-ordinate"; give their significance as applied to mutes.

Rules for dividing a word at the end of a line.

4. Define "barytone," as applied to both words and syllables. Distinguish "recessive" from the so-called "retentive"

(Gr. 128) accent. How can accent be recessive and retentive in the same word? Rules for the place and kind of the accent, as regulated by the quantity of the ultima and penult. Compare or distinguish Greek and English accent, as to nature and motive. Has accent any connection with the sense of a word? Illustrate from both English and Greek.

- 5. Define stem, as related to both the form and the sense of a word. Distinguish stem from "base," so called, and from root (Gr. 543). Distinguish suffix (Gr. 542), affix, ending, termination, characteristic.
- 6. If the accent of the nom. sing. of a noun be given, how may the accent of the other cases be known? Rule for accenting the ultima of nouns; for accenting neuters, and nom. sing. fem. ending in \check{a} ?
- 7. Explain ὁ ἄνθρωπος (man), ἡ ἄνθρωπος, τὸ ἄνθρωπος, ἡ ἀλώπηξ the fox (male or female), as illustrating gender. Distinguish οἶκοι and οἴκοι, cf. οἶκος house, Gr. 102.

Explain proclities; with both English and Greek examples.

- 8. What three varieties of nouns in Deel. I. are formed with the suffix τa, nom. της; accentuation of each? Meaning and accentuation of nouns in δης, of Deel. I.? When and where does the characteristic of nouns of Deel. I. remain unchanged? principal exc., Gr. 139 (c, d)? When and where does the characteristic a become η? principal exc., Gr. 139 a? Give the quantity of final a in ἀγκῦρα, μοιρα, ἀληθεια, in the nom. and gen. cases sing. Inflect these stems, with accents: σοφια, μουσα, σπονδα (oxytone), θαλασσα, δεσποτα, θεα. In ναύτης, what part is termination, affix, suffix, ending, case-ending, stem, root? Analyze χωρῶν.
- 9. Inflect and analyze $d\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\epsilon$, $\theta\epsilon\alpha$, $\delta\omega\rho\sigma\nu$, $\delta\omega\rho\sigma$. Justify the case ending of the nom. $\delta\omega\rho\sigma\nu$. What part of $\delta\omega\rho\omega\nu$ is stem, and what part base?
- 10. Distinguish restrictive and generic articles; verbals and denominatives (Gr. 541).

How are most compound nouns and adjectives accented? Distinguish φιλία from φίλια; φιλίων from φιλιῶν.

11. There were at least how many case forms in early Greek? name those that are lacking in the inflections as now found in the grammar; how are the relationships of the cases whose forms have disappeared provided for?

Is the appositive a predicate or an attributive? Distinguish attributive and predicate adjectives. Translate τὸ καλόν, and state the usage illustrated.

THE END.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS

FOR THE STUDY OF GREEK.

Hadley's Greek Grammar. Revised, and in part rewritten, by Frederick De Forest Allen, Ph. D., Professor of Classical Philology in Harvard University.

This grammar not only presents the latest and best results of Greek studies, but also treats the language in the light received from comparative philology. The work is clear in its language, accurate in its definitions, judicious in its arrangement, and sufficiently comprehensive for all purposes, while it is free from cumbrous details. It is simple enough for the beginner, and comprehensive enough for the most advanced students. 13:no. 405 pages. Introductory price, $1.50.

Greek Lessons. Prepared to accompany the Grammar of Hadley and Allen. By ROBERT P. KEEP, Ph. D., Principal of the Norwich (Connecticut) Free Academy.

An elementary Greek book intended to serve as a companion and guide to the Grammar, and as an introduction to the study of Xenophon. The publishers commend this work to American teachers with great confidence that it will be found to possess important advantages above other books of its class. 12mo. Introductory price, $1.20.

Elementary Lessons in Greek Syntax, designed to accompany the reading of Xenophon's Anabasis. By S. R. Winchell, A. M.

A series of lessons on Attic Greek Syntax, designed to follow about one year's study of the etymology of the language. It comprises lessons on the last half of the Grammar, with exercises and vocabularies, all arranged with a view of making the pupil familiar with the fundamental principles of Greek syntax. It is intended as an introduction to a thorough and comprehensive treatise on Greek prose composition. Introductory price, 54 cents.

Harkness's First Greek Book. Comprising an Outline of the Forms and Inflections of the Language, a complete Analytic Syntax, and an Introductory Greek Reader. With Notes and Vocabularies.

Revised and rewritten by the author. Designed especially to accompany Allen-Hadley's Greek Grammar, with references also to Goodwin's and Crosby's Greek Grammars. 12mo. 276 pages. Introductory price, §1.05.

GREEK LESSONS,

PREPARED TO ACCOMPANY THE GRAMMAR OF HADLEY AND ALLEN.

By ROBERT P. KEEP, Ph. D.,
Principal of the Norwich (Connecticut) Free Academy.

The Greek Grammar of Hadley and Allen has won for itself the position of a standard Manual of the Greek language, and is widely recognized as a book which every American student of Greek should possess. The only question is whether it should be purchased at the very outset, or whether a beginning should be made with a smaller and less complete grammar, this latter to give place after a year or two to the fuller treatise. It was with the design of making the path to the acquaintance with the new Hadley clear, sure, and not unnecessarily difficult, that the preparation of these Lessons was undertaken.

A good FIRST LESSONS is really an abridged grammar, constructed upon the lines of the larger treatise and employing precisely its language. Dr. Keep has done, in these Lessons, the work of abridging the new Hadley, and he has done it with such judgment as would have been expected from his knowledge of the needs of the beginner in Greek, and from his intimate familiarity with the grammar of Professor Hadley, both in its older and its more recent form.

The publishers commend this elementary Greek book to American teachers with great confidence that it will be found to possess important advantages above other books of its class,

FIRST FOUR BOOKS OF

XENOPHON'S ANABASIS,

BY

JAMES R. BOISE, Ph. D., LL. D., Professor of Greek in the University of Michigan.

WITH OR WITHOUT VOCABULARY.

As our colleges, with but one or two exceptions, require three or four books only of the Anabasis for admission, the majority specifying four books, we have substituted a Four-Book edition of "Boise's Anabasis" for the Three-Book and Five-Book editions heretofore published. This edition is thoroughly revised and up to date; has references to Hadley-Allen's, Goodwin's, and other Greek grammars; contains tables of grammatical references and exercises, Kiepert's Map of the Route of the Ten Thousand, tables of illustrations, etc. It is issued in two forms, viz., with and without vocabulary.

It is believed that this work will be found to be the most accurate, comprehensive, and attractive edition of the Anabasis heretofore published.

Introduction price, with vocabulary - $1.32.
" without vocabulary - 1.08.
